Nearly Thirty Killed and as Many Injured by Derailment at Honda on Coast Line—Buffalo and Reading People the Victims.

IN ONE of the most awful railroad disasters in the history of the State, yesterday afternoon, twenty-nine lives were snuffed out—most of them Shriners and members of their party returning home after a week of festivity in Los Angeles.

As many more people were injured, some of them so terribly that they will die.

The wreck occurred at Honda, a siding on a bleak, sand-swept section of the Coast Line of the Southern Pacific, five miles from Surf and 168 miles north of Los Angeles.

The wrecked train was a special, bearing Rajah Temple of Reading, Pa., Ismailia Temple of Buffalo, N. Y., and or [illegible] two members of Al Koran Temple of Cleveland, Ohio.

SANTA BARBARA (Cal.) May 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Twenty-seven dead and a score of others fatally injured is the one sad incident of the Shriners' excursions to California, Buffalo and Reading temples suffering in the terrible calamity that was enacted at Honda Station on the Coast Line a few miles north of Point Concepcion.

The Shriners' special leaving Santa Barbara at 12:10 this afternoon, came back into Santa Barbara an hour after midnight, a funeral train, carrying the bodies of twenty-one and leaving, it is feared, a number of others pinned beneath the wreckage.

Others of the party now lie dead in San Luis Obispo, having died on the relief train that carried the injured, numbering twenty-three. Some of the dead were crushed beyond recognition. Others were scalded in the escaping steam from the engine as several cars were piled on top of the locomotive as it went into the ditch.

The accident occurred at 2 o'clock, and at that hour there were thirty-two people seated in the dining car. It is not known that one of them escaped, but they are not all accounted for.

The cause of the accident is not definitely known. The appearance of the track after the wreck gave the impression that the switch at which the engine jumped the track had been misplaced.

Engineer Champlin says he heard something on the engine break, but the condition of the locomotive after the wreck was such that nothing could be told.

SECOND DISPATCH.

BY FRED R. BECHDOLT.

SANTA BARBARA (Cal.) May 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] When the special train carrying 250 Shriners reached Honda it left the track and in an instant twenty-six were killed and forty injured. The gala week was in that moment ended in pitiful tragedy. At the time of the crash thirty-two men and women were seated in the diner. This car was hurled upon the locomotive. It was split in twain and filled with scalding steam. All its occupants were killed or badly injured, save only two or three.

These passengers had left Santa Barbara less than an hour. They had taken the train fresh from a trip to the Old Mission. Happy and keenly hungry they hurried to the diner. Every seat was filled and many stood in the vestibule between this car and the next sleeper. They had seen California.

They were feasting their eyes on the last of its beauties.

Arab Patrol of Ismailia Temple, Buffalo, whose members were in the wreck.

Beside them lay the sea blue and flecked with white foam where the wind swept it. Ahead of them lay home. Then came the crash.

THE HORROR OF IT.

The locomotive left the rails and turned turtle. The baggage cars telescoped. Into this wreckage leaped the diner and falling it shattered into fragments. The two following sleepers telescoped. The rest of the train stayed on the track.

From the wreckage men crawled slowly, painfully. Behind them followed the hot steam. Some of them stopped in the hideous place to help the maimed, and of these some were caught by the white scalding clouds.

They had traveled to California, these passengers, in one happy family. In one family they had enjoyed themselves to the utmost, and in one family they suffered and died. The moment death hurts overwhelmed them they worked together and did for one another like brothers and sisters of one blood.

The wreck took place at 2:30 o'clock. It was hours before the arrival of nurses and doctors on a special train. During that interval the men and women who could walk cared for the helpless and the dead.

The first care was to remove the more seriously hurt. These were taken to San Luis Obispo.

Then came for the survivors a terrible ordeal. For many hours their train remained on the lonely siding while the dead were taken from the wreckage. It was 1:30 in the morning before they were taken back to Santa Barbara. Here had gathered men of their order. They came at the first news of the disaster from Los Angeles.

They were men from many cities. Hardly one of them knew the name of a single person on the wrecked train and yet the tears stood in the eyes of more than one as they waited for the special which bore the bodies. They are of our own family, is the way one of these men put it. These Shriners at once, upon the arrival of the special, took charge of caring for the hurt and caring for the dead. The former were taken to local hospitals. They were hurried away in closed carriages.

After these carriages had rattled away there came a heavier sound—the rumble of the trucks and the wagons which had been pressed into emergency service by the morgues. At the three local undertaking rooms members of this party of Shriners who had volunteered to do this work got the name and addresses of each who had died. These men set to work at one in the morning and continued until dawn. Following them members of the Imperial Council will come today to Santa Barbara and complete the work.

The wreck itself was one of the ugliest pile-ups in the history of western railroads. The train was running at high speed when it left the track. The fact that the locomotive turned over at once is responsible seemingly for the complete telescoping of the diner, which literally leaped upon it and the smashed baggage cars. At the time this happened every seat was full in the diner and lunch was in the midst of serving.

STEAM MELTED VICTIMS' FLESH AT WRECK.

When the relief train from here and San Luis Obispo arrived the scene was appalling. Bodies were strewn about beside the bent tracks. In the splintered masses of wood and steel more dead were wedged, while steam hissing from the kitchen ranges in the diner literally melted the flesh of the victims. Thirty-two were eating when the train hit the switch. All are dead or badly injured. Mrs. John W. Cutler of Binghamton, whose husband was killed, was in the baggage car to rearrange a trunk. Her body was driven through the floor and the wrecked car had to be jacked up before it could be released. Mrs. Fred Grummond was with her and also went down under the tons of luggage. When rescuers burrowed their way to where the two women lay the living one grasped a man's foot and shouted, "I'll not let go until you get me out."

Then a gust of scalding steam burned her face a ghastly white. When Miss Cora Young of Cleveland was taken from the shattered diner she was still living, but frightfully burned. Her entire body had been bathed in boiling water and when women passengers removed her corsets the imprint of the stays was left deep in the scalded flesh.

There were many deeds of courage and heroic self-abnegations. George

F. Hagerman of Reading, Pa., refused the aid of his brother Nobles after they had dragged him fatally hurt from the wreck.

"I'm dying," he said, "go help the women."

Fred Champlain, the engineer, ran three-quarters of a mile to the nearest ranch house for aid, though he had been hurled forty feet from his engine and alighted with a broken arm.

All the dead are here awaiting the inquest Monday, after which a funeral train will take the victims East.

Flagman's Wife Immediately Opens Aid Station, Makes Coffee for Wounded—Train is Kept on Sidetrack for Three Hours Until Message is Sent.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA BARBARA, May 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] An eye witness states that the loss of life would have been very much greater but for the fact that a carload of water stood upon a sidetrack within a few feet of the wreck. The overturned cars immediately took fire, and but for the presence of this water, would have burned from end to end.

Loud praise is bestowed upon a flagman's wife, whose house stood near the scene of the disaster, for the noble work she did in preparing and serving coffee to the wounded. She made trips with great cans of coffee and other food.

One of the leading Shriners accompanying the relief train on the return trip stated that the train was kept on a siding for three hours and would have been kept there longer but for his insistance upon one of the brakemen walking to the nearest telegraph station and wiring an urgent message.

All who returned on the relief train were more or less shaken by their terrible experience and showed marks of the wreck in the form of bloody bandages and torn clothes.

Critical Stage of Bay City's Fight With Unions Begins Today.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, May 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Although the cars were crowded with passengers all day long and San Francisco is rejoicing tonight in the belief that the strike is over, the real crisis is still to come.

Sunday will be one of the crucial days in the history of this city, and of labor unionism.

Gov. Gillett is here to watch results and if the slightest disturbance occurs, 2000 troops, now concentrated, will be in the city Monday morning. By the most desperate effort ever put forward by a labor union, the strike leaders managed to hold their ruffians in check today.

The cars passed through long lines of faces sneering with hate, but they passed in peace.

There was just one real outbreak, when workmen at Kearney and Sutter streets threw bricks from a nine-story building at a car filled with women and children.

By the irony of fate Gov. Gillett was standing on the opposite corner at the time.

Late into Friday night, meetings were held at all the labor headquarters by panic-stricken strike leaders and labor union magnates.

FEAR HIS COMING.

They had heard of the coming of the Governor.

Frantic messages were sent out yesterday morning. Delegates from the labor headquarters were sent hurrying along the route where they learned from Chief Dinan the cars would run. These delegates begged the workmen employed on the buildings to "for God's sake be good if you don't want to see this a scab town."

The coming of the militia means just that much.

It was a life or death struggle by the more far-seeing element of the union to hold down the raving wild-eyed brick throwers "just while the Governor is here."

The fact is the unions are in the position of a cat which has jumped a mud turtle and found the killing hard. They have retired to consider. After all these years of power, a strike cannot be settled and broken in this town in five days. It's foolish to think of it is all over. When the strike broke out last Tuesday the unions confidently expected that the public would be urging them and rooting for them. To their utter astonishment, the public made heroes instead of the hated scabs whom they tried to murder and cheered for the police when they clubbed the strikers half to death.

BAY CITY IS CHANGED.

It is a wonderful thing to have seen such a complete change come over a city in five days.

Finding that bricks and thuggery are no longer in public favor, the union leaders have drawn off to consider. Those closest to the situation fully believe that a period of dastardly, cruel, secret guerrilla warfare is about to begin.

Gov. Gillett arrived in San Francisco at 10:10 this morning. Mr. Calhoun started out fifteen cars at 10:15. Half of them started out over the same route where strikers crouched in doorways and fired shots at the "scabs" Tuesday. Past the same brick piles from which the rain of missiles crashed through the windows on Tuesday.

But yesterday it was the strike leaders who waited in their offices and shivered with apprehension for the safety of these same reviled "scabs" today.

In response to their frantic appeals, Jerry Dinan had placed hundreds of policemen along that route, guarding every brick pile and heap of stones. The company, however, rightly guessed that most of the trouble would take place on the Sutter-street line.

MULLALLY DESPISES DANGER.

Thornwell Mullally, the brilliant young assistant to Calhoun, insisted on riding in the first car. His men, who are devoted to him, begged him not to go. The newspaper men begged him not to go. It was well known that he was taking his life in his hands and would be a mark for every ruffian.

But Mullally only laughed.

I was one of those who tried to persuade him not to put his life in peril.

"Well," he said, "I am going. It isn't that I care a damn for the cars. I wouldn't do it for all the cars that were ever built. I am going out there for the principle of the thing. I sent some men out Tuesday, and I am going out today to—well, to show them."

But of course he was really going because he is Irish.

CALLS HIM MACKLIN.

Earl Rogers, who has been retained by Mr. Calhoun and is now in Sa

Francisco, calls Mullally "Capt. Macklin," after Richard Harding Davis's "Soldier of Fortune." It is a good name.

Mullally is one of the handsomest men I ever saw—six feet of clean Yale athlete. He is the perfect type of the Irish Virginian, among whom are the most distinguished families of the South.

He seems not to know the color of fear. He has eyes in which the light blazes up and dies down; that's the only sign when the fight is near. Mullally couldn't run the car himself, not knowing the trade of motorman, but he got a car with the front windows knocked out and rode over the entire route, leaning as far out the front of the car as he could possibly get.

He was distinctly the dramatic feature of today.

The car trundled out of the barns at Oak and Broderick streets and bowled along amid ominous silence. Most of the carmen had been cleverly withdrawn by Cornelius to attend a carman's funeral. The injunction of the union leaders lay heavily upon the rest. When the car got as far as Leavenworth street, however, a man got on the track with a horse and buggy. A woman rode with him. He poked along just as slowly as he could and the car came after him, hardly moving.

POLICEMAN REFUSES AID.

Mullally asked him to move out, but the man replied by a torrent of abuse and bad language. They passed Police Officer James Bruce, whose name ought to go down in disgrace as the only policeman who has refused to assist in keeping order. He was formerly a conductor in the employ of the road. Mullally asked him to arrest the man in the buggy.

"Oh, he ain't disturbing me much," replied Bruce coolly.

Another policeman, however, heard the controversy and rushed past Bruce and arrested the man.

Once a man in a spring wagon got on the track.

"Never mind calling any officer," said Mullally grimly. "I will attend to him." Just as he was sliding off the car, the man in the wagon took a look at the size of him and slid off the track.

As they came down over the hill the car was stopped by an immense iron girder lying across the track and further on more débris. This was cleared off amid bawls of "scab" from the crowd which was running alongside as usual.

SHOWER OF BRICKS.

Several women and children were on the car by the time they got to Kearney, where a shower of bricks came showering down from the ninth story. Luckily they missed the car. From that height they would have crashed through the roof.

The deliberate intention of the terra cotta workers and brick masons on that building must have been the murder of those passengers and that car crew. When they learned that the Governor of the State was standing on the opposite corner, the union leaders were sick.

The same plucky boy who took out the first car from the Turk and Fillmore street barn and faced the cold-blooded murder without a falter, took the first car from that barn again today. In place of the yelling, howling mob that surrounded it then there were only a few strikers looking hate and destruction, but saying nothing.

The cars left the barn almost in dead silence. They were the same old wrecked cars that came back battered and torn and blood-stained after the running fight in which they were insulted and stoned. The bricks still lay on the floor, and the platforms were still strewn with broken glass and the steps were still twisted where they went full tilt into the fence of the stockade after the strikers stole the car.

It made the trip without adventure except being hissed at a refugee camp. Women had to be lifted bodily into the car—for they insisted upon riding.

FIRST GIRL PASSENGER.

The honor of being the first woman passenger probably belongs to Miss Harriet Eastman, a tailor-made little miss with a dress suit case, who was bound for the ferry, and she got on far out on Devisadero, on Mullally's car, but they made her get off before they came to the danger zone.

After that several women rode. The first woman who got on the Turk street line had been shopping in the stores on Van Ness avenue. She came hurrying out shaking her hand at the car as though it were the most ordinary event in the world. The seccetary stopped for her. She felt to see if she had all her bundles before she got on. She got in a panic for fear she had forgotten one and finally reassured herself and at last was lifted on the car by one of the southern boys in charge.

SOUTHERNERS LEAD FIGHT.

This strike has been fought by Kentucky and Virginia—which have never been notable for being gun-shy. One of the first passengers was Theodore Kylka, the celebrated handwriting expert, who perched himself up on a rail and kept yelling for people to get on.

Another man got on very quietly and jumped off at the Olympic Club. When he stepped on the curbing men came hurrying out to congratulate him, shaking hands and clapping him on the back in full sight of the angry crowd of strikers on the opposite curb.

RIDES FOR PRINCIPLE.

One young man, who is one of the college boys who are making Nevada, and who has mines in Rhyolite, rode around all day for the principle of the thing.

One rather gawky individual insisted upon riding on the front platform flapping two American flags all the way. He said he had come all the way from San Mateo to ride on these cars with those flags. He stuck there all afternoon.

Among the women passengers was Mrs. Grace Summers, a prominent woman of San Francisco, daughter of a forty-niner.

"If this had been in my father's day," she said, "this agitator Cornelius would be hanging to a convenient tree before now." One of the women on the car at the time the bricks were thrown said her husband is a union man but if he countenanced anything like that she said she would leave him.

Some of the men on the car say that they saw a union carpenter tear up his union card.

Of course, among civilized people the attempt to deliberately murder a woman and children in a crowded car would be esteemed a breach of etiquette, but unions have done many things as bad without any noticeable qualms.

Before the afternoon was over, the cars were crowded with passengers. They went along in the ordinary way with the conductors collecting fares and people standing on one another's feet. Wherefore people rejoiced and now say "that it is all over."

But the unions say among themselves: "We will find some way to fix 'em yet."

Labor Leader Mahon Ill.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 11.—Members of the Carmen's Union say they do not know when W. D. Mahon, president of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employés of America, who is on his way to this city, will arrive here. When he left Hot Springs in response to a telegram urging immediate presence here he was very ill and it was against the advice of his physicians that he rose from a sick bed and started. Since then no word has been received from him, and those who await his coming believe he may have found it necessary to stop off for medical attention.

PASSENGERS NOT AFRAID TO RIDE.

GOV. GILLETT WITNESSES STRIKERS' VIOLENCE.

Women Who Patronized the Cars Were Assailed With Shocking Profanity by Strike Sympathizers and Union Workmen Hurl Bricks from Ten-story Building.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, May 11.—For the first time since the commencement of the street-car strike a week ago, the United Railroads today operated cars in passenger traffic, and during the late hours of the forenoon, and until 5 o'clock in the evening about 1000 men and women were carried.

Only two of the twenty lines composing the system were operated—the Sutter and Eddy-street lines. Ten cars were run with five-minute headway from the car barn at Turk and Fillmore street, east on Turk to the intersection of Market and Eddy, west on Eddy to Devisadero, south on Devisadero to Turk and thence to Fillmore.

Fifteen cars were run from the barn at Oak and Broderick streets out Oak to Stanyan, on Stanyan to Page, on Page to Devisadero, on Devisadero to Sutter, on Sutter to Market, and back again over the same route. One hundred and twenty-five non-union motormen and conductors manned these twenty-five cars.

About 500 policemen, a few of them mounted, guarded the streets over which the cars were operated, and acts of slight violence occurred at various points during the day, while hoots and jeers were mingled with cheers and shouts of approval; but no serious outbreaks featured this first actual attempt to resume the operation of cars.

Nevertheless the officials of the United Railroads expressed no elation at the day's results, although they say that if 500 policemen are required to make possible the carrying of passengers in twenty-five cars over two miles, they have no great hope that the 700 officers composing the force will be able to safeguard 450 cars on twenty lines, 250 miles in length.

One of the most important happenings of the day was the arrival in the afternoon of Gov. Gillett, who came from Los Angeles to personally investigate the strike situation and determine whether the calling out of the militia is required.

The Governor soon after his arrival held a conference in the Ferry building with Mayor Schmitz, Adjt.-Gen. Lauck, Gen. Robert Wankowski, commanding the Seventh Regiment, National Guard, and a number of prominent citizens.

Signed statements were received by Gov. Gillett from President Calhoun of the United Railroads and President Cornelius of the Carmen's Union, setting forth the respective sides of the controversy. Subsequently the Governor and Mr. Calhoun had a private conference which lasted half an hour.

Gov. Gillett himself witnessed one of the days' acts of violence, when union workmen on a building at Kearney and Sutter streets bombarded the passenger-filled cars with stones and bricks hurled from a height of eight and ten stories.

INSULT WOMEN PASSENGERS.

An unpleasant feature of today's disturbances was the frequent insulting of passengers, women and men indiscriminately by men in the crowds. In several instances especially noted women passengers were assailed with shocking profanity because they had displayed the courage to board the cars and ride on them.

The worst act of violence was at Sutter and Kearney streets where union workmen on the Sherman and Clay building, in course of construction hurled bricks and stones from many windows. Most of the missiles struck the tops of the passing cars and no one in them was injured, but three men working in the street were hurt. An officer with drawn revolver entered the building and made two arrests.

Some of the tactics employed by the strikers to impede the progress of the cars were the placing of iron girders across the rails, the strewing of paving blocks and the filling of switches with cement.

On Sutter street near Steiner a torpedo exploded under one of the cars and gave rise to a rumor which flashed over the whole city that a car had been blown up by dynatime.

No damage was done, though the car was delayed for several minutes by the great crowd which immediately collected. It is evident that the explosive missile contained no dynamite, as at first was reported, and probably was nothing more dangerous than a large bomb of the fire cracker type.

Assistant President Mullally of the United Railroads rode on the first car sent out today and stood beside the motorman. On Sutter street at Mason, a union teamster drove his load onto the tracks in front of Mullally's car and refused to move until the Assistant President had threatened to yank him out of his seat and thrash him. On Eddy street, between Steiner and Fillmore, a passenger was pulled off a car and severely beaten by a strike sympathizer. He was rescued by a policeman, who arrested the assailant and immediately afterward turned him loose.

All along the lines of procession throughout the day business men and many women vied with the strikers and other friends in saluting the unarmed non-union operatives. The former cheered the men lustily and threw flowers at them; the latter cursed them and promised with great vehemence to "give them all they were looking for," when they should get down in the burned district south of Market street.

Filing of Suit of "Big Bill" Hawley Ostensibly for Simple Breach of Contract, but Really for Securing Evidence to Ruin Spouse Makes Absolute Separation Certain.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, May 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Gould learned with regret today that their eight months of separation had at last reached such a stage of bitterness that all hope of reconciliation is lost and that she will soon begin an action against him.

Those who know the Goulds express sorrow that their romance should end in tragedy. Mrs. Gould's friends say that when all the circumstances are known it will be seen that her husband has forced her to take the aggressive in a family quarrel which his own actions made irreconcilable.

The thing that decided Mrs. Gould that peace was impossible was the filing of the suit of "Big Bill" Hawley against Howard Gould for breach of contract for $250,000. The public understood the action only in a general way, but to Mrs. Gould's mind it suggested the desire or at least a willingness on the part of her husband to ruin her.

Hawley, one of the most notorious criminals in the world, is understood to have offered to produce for Howard Gould testimony against his own wife. When Hawley began his action it was on its face merely a breach of contract suit, although his lawyers were unwilling to embody his statements in their complaint, he really alleges that he was to get money to prove that Mrs. Gould had a husband living at the time she married Mr. Gould.

When Mrs. Gould was informed of lengths to which her husband was said to have gone in his bitterness against her, she herself decided to fight. The exact nature of the cause of action will not be disclosed until the summons is served.

A close friend of Mrs. Gould said tonight that detectives employed by Howard Gould had been spying on her for the past three years.

Largest Daily Paper in the World. A Surpassing Record.

YEAR after year for the past decade the Los Angeles Times has shown a steady, substantial growth in its advertising and circulation business. The advertising measurements can be easily verified; and the sworn detailed circulation statements for each month during past years have been printed regularly in these columns.

Note the increase from year to year, as set forth in the tabulated statement following, which is unparalleled, as far as paid advertising goes, by any publication in the world:

Year.	Columns Advertising.	Sworn Average Circulation.
1902	30,169	31,250 Copies
1903	35,151	36,557 Copies
1904	36,604	37,702 Copies
1905	47,512	43,150 Copies
1906	58,356	50,501 Copies

For the year 1897, ten years ago, the average daily circulation of The Times was 19,258 copies. As set forth in the above statement, the average for last year was 50,501 copies, showing the handsome increase of over 170 per cent. during the period of ten years.

In point of advertising volume and in number of pages printed, day in and day out, the Los Angeles Times is admittedly the biggest newspaper in the whole world.

During the first four months of 1907, an aggregate of 20,568 columns of paid advertising matter appeared in The Times, an average of over 5000 columns per month.

"I have tried female help of the white variety and I found that it was impossible to get faithful service." Mrs. Judah continued, "every white girl who applies for a position wants to know if we keep a second maid, fearing that she will be called upon to do some actual work. If you inform her that you are going to have company to dinner, she will shirk and The Japs on the other hand, are and lovable."

The conclusions are substantiated by of interviews with other club

STRIKERS PLAN TO SPIT ON HOTEL FLOOR.

Vigilant Hotel Protector Stations Aids to Repel Gang of Striking Machinists Who Threaten to Dirty Hostelry in Revenge for Advertisement for Men.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) May 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Vigilant Capt. W. H. Pellum, famous strike-breaker, made an elaborate disposition of his lieutenants at the Planters' Hotel today, to repel the legion of able tobacco chewers, with whom Business Agent Eugene Sarber of the striking Machinists' Union threatened to invade the hotel in reply to an advertisement asking men to apply today to take the strikers' jobs.

Outside the hotel, Pellum stationed pickets to apprise him of the approach of the enemy. In the lobby sat other argus-eyed lieutenants. One standing near the clerk, when a reporter asked to be shown to the captain's room, obligingly dogged his footsteps to see that he meant no mischief. Before the captain's door sat a watchful giant who eyed the reporter with deep suspicion. When at last admitted to the citadel by the captain, who wilily inquired his business before opening the door, the reporter was told that he had already hired several score of strike-breakers.

"If Sarber comes around here with his tobacco chewers, I'll have them all arrested under the city ordinances prohibiting spitting," said Pellum. "Besides, they'll get a mighty warm welcome from my trusty lieutenants. We are prepared for business."

Shortly before noon, Pellum and his aids thought their vigilance was at last vindicated, for a sharp report like the discharge of a pistol sounded at the north entrance of the Planters.' With the doughty leader in the van, they rushed out to meet the foe, but their faces fell when they found the sound was only the explosion of an automobile muffler.

Sarber's threat to have the 800 strikers, all chewing tobacco, call in answer to the advertisement, was made when the Planters' management refused to eject Pellum or compel him to cease advertising.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

LONDON, May 11.—According to the Vienna correspondent of the Express, Mrs. Wowanke, the wife of a Chicago engineer, has been arrested at her parents' home in Radwanitz, Silesia, on the serious charge of having committed lese majeste in love letters she wrote two years ago.

Mrs. Wowanke, it is stated, was originally betrothed to a Pole of the the name of Strobowiski. The girl canceled the engagement and went to America where she married Mr. Wowanke. Later she returned to visit her parents.

Thereupon Strobowiski, in order to obtain revenge for his jilting, submitted to the public prosecutor love letters written, it is alleged, by his former sweetheart in which she attached the Emperor's Polich policy. Her arrest followed on the eve of her return to Chicago.

SHRINERS KILLED.

fainting condition, owing to the nervous shock and the long stretch of eleven hours without food.

Those who escaped from the wreck and whose nearest and dearest were not numbered among the dead and dying made a rush from the train to the various hotels, their one object seeming to be to escape from all reminders of the catastrophe.

Those who had friends and relatives stretched across the seats of the forward coach were too distracted to be of any service to the corps of doctors and undertakers, and were not allowed in the death van.

STORY OF EYEWITNESS.

Only one or two of the passengers were willing to say anything about their experiences, all being utterly used up by the trying hours which followed the wreck.

William H. Doherty, a member of the Board of Police Commissioners of Buffalo and prominent Shriner of Ismailia Temple, gave a vivid word-picture of his experiences and the hardships that followed the smash-up:

"I was in one of the rear coaches of the train when the engine jumped the track," said he, "and to this fact I undoubtedly owe my life for everyone that was killed was either in the diner or the next coach. We were traveling along at a good rate of speed, but not an excessive one, when the crash came and before anyone realized what happened the cars were piled up and all were thrown violently from their seats. Those of us who could got clear of the wreckage of seats and windows and rushed outside to help the unfortunates who were under the forward cars."

A BRAVE WOMAN.

When the relief train arrived at Sutton on the way to the Shriner special wreck at Honda, Miss Maria Fuller, 19 years old, No. 1610 South Burlington avenue, Los Angeles, jumped aboard.

"I want to go with you to the wreck," she said to Dr. A. W. Taylor, the Southern Pacific division surgeon, who had charge of the train. She was going to San Francisco with the Shriners, but happily was with the Detroit, Rhode Island, Boston and Hartford Temples.

"You can't go," replied the surgeon. Ten minutes later, when the train was clipping miles at the rate of fifty an hour, a wisp of dark-brown hair blowing up above the front car platform drew the attention of Dr. Taylor and the conductor. A moment more and they had dragged the girl from the tender brake beam of the speeding engine. Brought into the car, Miss Fuller smiled away the doctor's glowering looks.

"I really had to go," she said. "I'm a member of South Gate Lodge, Eastern Star, and I'm pledged to give aid whenever I can."

On the way back she did her best to comfort Mrs. A. P. Wasson, whose year-old baby had been rendered fatherless by the wreck.

DYING CRY IN AGONY.

"I can't describe what we saw. It's far too horrible. The engine was lying on its side, and the light baggage car was also overturned with the heavy diner on top of it.

"From beneath the mass of débris came the most horrible cries of agony and calls for help, and throughout the length of the wrecked section there were battered heads and disfigured faces, some already beyond aid, while others begged to be liberated from the entanglement.

"It was hours before the relief train arrived, and all during the wait the survivors did what they could to help, but saw some terrible sights. Finally, when this relief train did get in, we were held up along the line and side-tracked to make way for the regular trains, until the women and the men, too, almost went under from hunger and exhaustion."

PASSENGER'S DESCRIPTION.

One of the passengers says:

"The big locomotive was dashed on its side and the baggage, dining car and one Pullman were splintered in the most horrible wreck that ever happened on the Coast Line. Men and women were caught helpless and fearfully mangled and burned when the cars were crumpled like leaves of paper.

"Then, as an aftermath, the relief train returning to Santa Barbara with the dead and the lesser wounded, was halted out on a siding amid lonely sand dunes while four belated trains passed by. Grief stricken and hysterical women and bruised and bleeding and exhausted men were kept far out on the beach wastes for six hours without food, crowded into wreck-littered cars and without any attention or comfort."

CAUSE OF WRECK IS NOT CERTAIN.

MAY BE DUE TO IMPROPERLY PLACED SWITCH.

Another Theory Is That It Is Result of Deliberate Effort to Ditch Train — Officials Say Nothing. Engine and Diner Completely Smashed—Engineer and Fireman Little Hurt.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA BARBARA, May 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The wreck was probably due to an improperly placed switch. The point of the switch-rail was broken by the forward wheels of the locomotive, causing the engine to climb to the top of the rail, along which it flew for about forty feet, then taking the ties for about 350 feet, when it went into the ditch, just at Honda station, in a level country.

The engine plunged to the left, the tender going over it, and carrying with it the cab, which landed about fifty feet ahead of the engine. The baggage car went under the engine, and, with the diner, which followed, was a total wreck. The diner was left lying on its side, parallel with the track, with one end on top of the engine.

It was in the baggage and dining cars that the greatest execution was done, no one escaping.

The sleepers Guinna and Oswego, carrying the Buffalo and Reading (Pa.) Temples, then left the track, the first going to the right and the second to the left, piling on top of the diner. The last two Pullmans remained on the track.

The train was running at fifty miles an hour at the time of the accident. The terrific force tore up the track for a distance of 150 feet, but, owing to the level country and the presence of sidetracks, the way will soon be cleared.

The engine was one of the big moguls, No. 2412. About all that was left of it was the number. A mass of twisted iron and steel lying at the side of the track, with the lighter parts scattered for a distance of one hundred feet, was all that remained of the monster of power that carried the Shriner train to its doom.

How Engineer Champlin escaped with only a broken arm and the fireman with a broken leg can scarcely be explained. Each was dug out of the wreckage shortly after the catastrophe. Neither could explain the cause of the wreck, Champlin saying that he could remember nothing, having been rendered unconscious by a blow on the head.

The only evidence on which the cause could be based was the condition of the switch and rails. While it seems to be accepted that there was something the matter with the switch, the nature of the trouble cannot yet be definitely ascertained. There is a possibility that the switch has been tampered with. The fact that an effort was made to wreck a Coast Line train near Ventura, some days ago, by opening a switch and that a reward has been offered by the railroad company for the arrest of the wreckers, would lend color to this theory, but there is no statement to be had from the railroad people here.

CAPT. H. I. SACKETT, of Ismailia Temple Patrol, Buffalo.

POUR OUT GOLD FOR RELIEF.

With unstinted liberality the imperial treasury of the Shrine will be thrown open for the relief and comfort of the victims of yesterday's accident.

At 1 o'clock this morning Fred A. Hines received a telephone message from Imperial Treasurer W. S. Brown, who had left the ill-fated train in Santa Barbara. He told of arrangements made for the care of the dead and injured. He said that the exact number of the dead could not be learned at that time.

FIXING TRACKS MADE TROUBLE.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SANTA BARBARA, May 11.—A report from San Luis Obispo, which appears to be well founded, gives as the cause of the wreck the fact that a railroad crew was engaged in repairing the track. The wrecked special approached without warning at a very high rate of speed, and the track gave way.

VICTIMS REACH SANTA BARBARA.

SPECIAL TRAIN BEARS LOAD OF TWENTY-SEVEN DEAD.

In Wrecked Coaches There Were One Hundred and Forty-five People, Including Shriners and Railway Men—Three Temples Were Represented.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SANTA BARBARA, May 12.—The special train, bearing 21 dead from the Shriner special wreck at Honda, arrived here at 1:30 this morning. The dead were immediately removed to local undertaking parlors. This train was expected to return to Santa Barbara at 9 p.m., last evening, but was held several hours at Elwood, a siding, while several eastbound Shriner specials went by.

Physicians and others returning on this train say that when they arrived at the scene of the wreck, the injured had already been taken on board the special for San Luis Obispo. They confirmed the report that six of the more seriously injured died while on the way to the latter place. This makes a total of 27 dead.

There were 145 people on the wrecked train. Of this number 72 belong to Ismailia Temple, Buffalo; 48 to Rajah Temple, Reading; five to Salaam Temple, New Jersey; 20 more were trainmen, porters, waiters, etc.

HONDA A DREARY WASTE OF SAND.

SCENE OF THE WRECK A MOST FORBIDDING PLACE.

No Habitation Along the Track for Miles and a Large Force of Men Constantly at Work to Keep the Sand from Covering the Rails. Name Simply Denotes a Siding.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA BARBARA, May 11.—[Exclusvie Dispatch.] Honda, sixty-five miles west of Santa Barbara, the scene of the wreck of the New York Shriners' train, is a wind-swept stretch of coast between Point Concepcion and the mouth of the Santa Ynez River. The road follows the shore line closely for most of the distance, and winds through sand dunes, the railroad track being protected by wind-breaks to hold the drifting sands.

There is hardly a more forbidding and bleak section of country in the whole State. There are few residences even along the line of the railroad, and the nearest town of any considerable size is Lompoc, which is on a branch line. On one side of the track are miles and miles of huge heaps of sand, and on the other and almost within stone's throw of the railroad right-of-way the surf breaks ceaselessly. Here and there along the road is a section-man's shanty, for the railroad company is obliged to guard that portion of the road as carefully as the great transcontinental lines of the North guard their roadways against snow blockades.

The place marked Honda on the railroad maps is simply a siding, and there are no buildings there. It is merely an occasional passing point for trains, and there is no telegraph office nearer than Surf, nearly six miles away.

Whenever the wind blows off the ocean, the loose sand is piled upon the tracks until it sometimes covers the rails a foot or two deep, and to prevent wrecks the railroad company keeps a large force of men at work on the tracks at all times.

It is not known whether the wreck was caused by sand on the track, which resulted in a derailment, or whether, as first reported, one of the wheels of the big locomotive broke and caused it to leave the ails. The latter theory is the one most generally accepted, but the truth will not be known until what remains of the engine is dug out of the mass of wreckage which now covers it.

READING HEARS ABOUT TRAGEDY.

VICTIMS ARE AMONG BEST MEN OF PENNSYLVANIA.

News of Disaster Comes After Families of Victims Had Read Glowing Accounts of Delightful Fiesta and Bounteous Hospitality Enjoyed in City of Angels.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

READING (Pa.) May 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Shortly after midnight a dispatch was received in this city from T. J. Livengood from Sudden, Cal., giving meager information that a serious wreck had occurred to the Reading party of Shriners that has been in California for the past week. The Reading party consisted of fifty-three members of the Rajah Shriners of this city. The order is one of the most influential and wealthiest in this part of the State. Those that met their death in the wreck are some of the richest citizens here, occupying high positions in both the professinal and business associations of the town.

The party left this city on April 28 over the Reading Railroad. The first stop was made at Allentown, where they were joined by twelve members of the Shriners' order of that city. From this city the party was taken over the Lehigh Valley Railroad to Buffalo, N. Y., where the contingent of that city met them.

The Mecca order from New York also joined at this point, making a party of over 300 members. Nothing occurred to mar their trip to the Coast from this point. The members frequently sent messages home along the route, giving accounts of the good time they were having.

The Reading people who were killed, as stated above, bore prominent position in life, and are as follows:

GEORGE HAGERMAN, aged 47 years, son of the late Judge Jeremiah Hagerman, who occupied the bench for nearly thirty-five years. The former was one of the leading members of the bar, having been in practice for nearly twenty years. He leaves a wife, but no children.

A. L. ROTH, aged 56 years, large dealer in real estate and was also engaged in the coal and wood business, located on South Seventh street; he leaves a wife and several children.

J. DOUGLAS HIPPLE, aged 41 years, was employed at the Hall, holding position as chief clerk in the Prothonotary office; he leaves wife and several children, residing on Mineral Spring Road, one of the wealthiest suburbs of the city.

HENRY HENDLE, aged 54 years, is one of the largest wool hat manufacturers in Pennsylvania, employing hundreds of men and women in turning out million hats a year that are sent to Texas and California. He resides at 235 South Fifth street, and leaves a widow and three children who have almost reached adult life.

OLIVER KAUFMAN, aged 37, is a prominent attorney at the county bar and enjoys a large practice, principally with railroads. His father is one of the wealthiest farmers living at Womelsdorf. He also leaves a widow and two children residing in this city.

W. BENTON STOLZ, aged 41, is a railroad official of the Reading Railroad Company, located here, and leaves a large circle of railroad friends throughout this locality. He leaves a wife and several children residing on Center avenue, the finest suburb here.

GILBERT STEFFE, aged 38, is a son of a deceased railroad manager and was engaged in the same business at the time of his death. He leaves a wife, but no children, residing here.

HENRY K. GITTLEMAN, aged 58, is a prominent merchant located on South Third street, having been in that business for many years. It was his first trip West and his sudden death prostrated his wife when your representative called at his late residence and informed her of her husband's sudden death. He also leaves several children, two of whom reside at home.

HENRY H. HAMMEL, aged 37, a merchant located on Penn street, near Fifth; also occupied several high positions under the Republican administration some years ago. He leaves a widow and three children residing in the northern section of that city.

At an early hour this morning instructions were sent by relatives to T. J. Livengood, the leader of the party, to make the necessary preparations of forwarding the remains of the killed to this city as soon as the officials of the railroad would permit such action. As it is not definitely known at this writing regarding those that were injured, nothing can be obtained until the relatives of the tourists can be seen today.

FIVE DOCTORS ON TRAIN.

SUCCOR DYING AND WOUNDED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA BARBARA, May 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Fortunately for the injured, there were five doctors among the surviving Shriners on the train, and by the time the Santa Barbara relief train had reached the scene, the more seriously wounded had received surgical attention and had been sent on to San Luis Obispo. The San Luis relief train is carrying all of the injured.

The relief train returning to Santa Barbara made slow progress, having left the scene of the wreck at 8:10 p.m. and being held on sidetracks at various points while other Shriner trains north-bound passed, causing a delay of several hours. When the train reached here, the police immediately took charge and, assisted by trainmen, maintained a strict cordon, preventing any communication with the survivors who accompanied the remains of their comrades.

Of the twenty-one dead returned to Santa Barbara, five are women, twelve Shriners and four trainmen.

The inquest may not be held until Monday, although no arrangements have been announced.

ENGINEER GIVES HIS VERSION.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN LUIS OBISPO, May 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Engineer Champlin, at his home here tonight, told the story of the wreck as follows:

"The train was running at the ordinary rate of speed when the engine struck the switch rail at the east end of the Honda switch. I heard something break about the engine and think the wreck may have been caused in that way. The engine turned up on the forward end. The dining-car was forward underneath the engine and the baggage car went on top of the engine. The wreck occurred at 2:38 o'clock and at that time the diner was filled with people. Many who were not killed outright were scalded to death by steam from the engine. The baggage car and diner and one Pullman were smashed into splinters.

"I found myself between the engine and a car and in escaping my arms and face were badly scalded. Fireman Glen Thompson was badly injured and Brakeman Bickford had his back broken. Fire broke out in the wreckage soon after the accident happened, but the flames were promptly extinguished. Three cars in rear end of train were not derailed. The train did not go over six car lengths after the engine struck the switch."

Drs. McGovern and Stover of this city were rushed to the wreck and attended to the injured, while they were being brought here on a relief train tonight.

CLEVELAND WOMAN DEAD.

BOTH ARE WELL KNOWN.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CLEVELAND (O.) May 11.—Mrs. Fisher, who was killed in the California wreck, was the wife of Henry J. Fisher, a druggist, who is one of the best known business men of Cleveland.

Miss Cora Young, also killed, was a daughter of Mrs. Fisher by a former marriage. Mr. Fisher and L. W. Oster accompanied them, all of them going with the Buffalo party.

PALL OF GLOOM OVER ALL HERE.

HORRIBLE NEWS CARRIES WOE TO MANY HEARTS.

Brother Shriners Weep as They Hear of the Awful Fate That Befell Those Who but a Few Brief Hours Before Had Taken Part in the Gay Festivities of the Week.

Many thousand visiting Shriners who still remained in Los Angeles were stunned last evening when they heard the first news of the horrible disaster at Honda.

In the lobby of the Alexandria Hotel, where the life of the last week seems to have centered, gathered small groups of Shriners and their friends. They could not believe the statement that two score of their friends and comrades with whom they had passed the last week in gaiety had gone down to a black death.

Then came a relieving announcement from some petty, befuddled official of the Southern Pacific, saying that it was all a mistake and that only three people had been injured and two of them were members of the crew on the train.

Shortly, on the heels of this foolish statement, came the news that already eighteen bodies had been recovered and still more lay dead.

All thoughts of pleasure were banished. Tears came to the eyes of men and women.

Fred A. Hines, a member of the Imperial Council, was one of the first to arrive. He took charge of the receipt and announcement of the news. He attempted manfully to prove the correctness of each report before he would permit any name to be given out as among the dead.

Then, about 8 o'clock, a long list came rolling over the wire. It contained the names of fifteen of the dead. A great stillness fell upon the lobby. Even before it was announced, everyone seemed to grasp the fact that the horrible list was to be augmented.

The bulletin board upon which for the last week the gay announcements of the headquarters of the various temples had appeared was stripped and instead the grim [illegible] Shriners was posted.

The news spread that [illegible] of the dead had been [illegible] great throng pressed [illegible] to the hotel. No restri[illegible] upon them. All who [illegible] read the list reverent[illegible] hats.

Others were similarly [illegible] bers of Ismailia and [illegible] ples came in softly and [illegible] of lifelong friends, with [illegible] had been celebrating the [illegible] pleasure, bulletined as [illegible] in the wreck.

Just then a loud [illegible] lout passed the [illegible] ing at the top of his [illegible] three Shriners rushed [illegible] street. In a fierce [illegible] manded:

SUBSTANTIAL WOMEN OF THE UNITED STAT

Cystitis Entirely Relieved.

Miss Mattie McArthur, care of Hospital, Medical Lake, Wash., writes:

"I have not written to you for some time, but, oh, I have given you many words of praise. I am so well.

"I had cystitis very badly and could not walk any distance without suffering intense pain, but I do not have a touch of my old suffering now.

A Word to Other Women.

"I trust that no one will think from this that I want my name in public for any cause only to let sufferers know where they may find relief from many ailments.

"I can truly say I have been much benefited by the use of Peruna. I feel better than I have for two years. It is the best medicine that I know for internal troubles. I have taken medicine from the doctors and found no relief; but when I began taking Peruna I could see that before I had finished taking the first bottle it was doing me good.

"I recommend it to all suffering women. I think that it is the best medicine in the world. I can't say enough in its favor."—Mrs. George C. Worstell, 11 River Road, Clarksburg, W. Va.

Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

"I have been troubled for sixteen years with kidney and bladder trouble, and have taken all kinds of medicine for the trouble without relief.

"I at last saw Dr. Hartmann's advertisement, and I wrote to him describing my case. He pronounced it chronic catarrh of the bladder and urinary organs. He advised me to take Peruna, which I did, according to his directions.

"After taking one bottle I felt much better. I have now taken six bottles and I am now cured of the old trouble of sixteen years' standing.

"I advise all that are troubled in the way I have been to take Peruna and be cured as I am.

"I feel better than I have for ten years. I shall always keep Peruna in the house. I cannot praise it half enough, for it has been a God-send to me."—Mrs. H. E. Russell, Box 94, South Sutton, N. H.

Internal Catarrh.

"I suffered with internal catarrh until I wrote to Dr. Hartman, and after taking treatment as he advised, I can say I am now cured of this most trying affliction, for which I am truly thankful. I think Peruna the best medicine for catarrh. I never felt better in my life than I do at present."—Mrs. Etta Booker, Dundurn, Sask., N. W. T., Canada.

We have in our files a great many other testimonials.

For Suffering Women.

Mrs. J. F. Summitt, corner Seventh and Cypress streets, Muscatine, Iowa, writes:

"It has been some time since you have heard from me, but I am getting along all right. Peruna has cured me.

"I hope other suffering women will give Peruna a trial the same as I have done, for if it will cure me it will surely cure others."

Dyspepsia and Constipation.

"As to the merits of Peruna, too much cannot be said.

"I am sixty years old and have just found out a medicine that is a great improvement to my health. I have suffered for years with dyspepsia and constipation. The use of Peruna two weeks only has given me great relief.

"I wish Dr. Hartman grand success."—Helen A. Maxfield, M. D., Lyman, Utah.

Catarrh of Kidneys and Bowels.

"I must inform you that I recovered my health after using your valuable medicine, Peruna. I had suffered with catarrh of the kidneys and bowels, but now I am much better and feel real strong.

"I can only praise your medicine and extend my hearty thanks to you herewith."—Mrs. Maria Gongoll, Mayer, Minn.

Peruna is not simply a palliative to relieve some of the distressing symptoms. It brings permanent relief.

System All Run Down.

Miss Ricka Leopold, 137 Main street, Menasha, Wis., Secretary Liederkranz, writes:

"Three years ago my system was in a terribly run down condition and I was broken out all over my body. I began to be worried about my condition and was glad to try anything that would relieve me.

"Peruna was recommended to me as a fine blood remedy and tonic, and I soon found that it was worthy of praise. A few bottles changed my condition materially and in a short time I was all over my trouble.

"I owe my restoration to health and strength to Peruna. I am glad to endorse it."

"I was bothered with a pain in my left side for twenty-one years. Peruna and Manalin cured me. I think it is the best medicine to take for catarrh."—Mrs. S. V. Griffith, Utopia, Texas.

Effects of La Grippe.

Mrs. C. S. Sagerser, 1311 Woodland Ave., Kansas City., Mo., writes:

"I feel it a duty due to you and to others that may be afflicted like myself, to speak for Peruna.

"My trouble first came after la grippe, eight or nine years ago, a gathering in my head and neuralgia. I suffered most all the time. My nose, ears and eyes were badly affected. For the last two years, I think from your description of internal catarrh that I must have had that also. I suffered very severely.

"Nothing ever relieved me like Peruna. It keeps me from taking cold. With the exception of some deafness I am feeling perfectly cured.

"I am forty-six years old. I feel that words are inadequate to express my praise for Peruna."

The plan of furnishing on a large scale, directly to the people, a remedy for chronic catarrh, is an immense saving to the people.

Stomach Trou[illegible]

Mrs. Wilson Robinson, [illegible] wood Ave., Toledo, Ohio, [illegible]

"I feel like a new [illegible] no more heavy feeling, [illegible] don't belch up gas, can [illegible] thing without it hurting [illegible] to be working all the [illegible] gained twenty-four [illegible]

"People that see me [illegible] me two months ago [illegible] I tell them Peruna did [illegible] it is the only remedy [illegible] all other ailments."

CHICAGO POLICE GIVE ORDERS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, May 11.—The police department has determined that the proposed demonstration in behalf of Moyer and Haywood, which the Socialist and labor unions of a socialistic trend are getting up for May 19, shall be a peaceful affair.

When a committee representing the [illegible] Moyer-Haywood conference called on Chief Shippy yesterday, it was not given a permit for the parade, but the committee was told he would take the request under advisement. Later, Chief Shippy intimated that a permit for the parade would be issued, but stated that he would not allow gatherings in the open streets.

While Chief Shippy would not confirm the report, it was said that a pledge will be exacted from the Moyer-Haywood conference people, that no red banners or red flags be carried in the parade. The police, it is said, will insist on excluding banners inscribed with phrases of an incendiary character.

CHICAGO CARMEN CONFER.

DEMAND FURTHER INCREASE.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, May 11.—A conference on wages to be paid to the employés of the Chicago City Railway Company was held today at the office of President T. E. Mitten of the company. A delegation from the Street Carmen's Union, headed by M. C. Buckley, president of the union, will call on Mr. Mitten and attempt to secure adoption of the union's proposition for higher wages, to apply between [illegible] and April 1, 1908.

The company is in between two fires on the proposition. About a week before the last election, it announced it would pay 27 cents an hour for experienced men if its traction settlement ordinance should be approved by the voters.

On the strength of this promise, several hundred employés are said to want the increase immediately, but a majority of the union demands a greater increase than offered by the company. The wage scale now in operation is [illegible] an hour for the first six months, [illegible] cents for the next six months and 25 cents thereafter. The company offers 23 cents an hour for the first six months, 24 for the next six months and 27 cents thereafter. The union demands 25 cents for the first six months and 33 1-2 cents per hour thereafter.

In addition to the increase, the union demands a closed shop for the South Side system, the hiring of only union men in the future. A 10 per cent. increase is also demanded for the shop men.

At Batson the operators stated that the strikers will have to wait for vacancies.

STRIKE'S BACK IS SHATTERED.

STRENGTH OF LONGSHOREMEN IS DWINDLING.

Many Members of Stevedores' Union Desert Body and Take Their Jobs Again—Organizations That Walked Out in Sympathy Return to Work, Tiring of Thankless Loafing.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, May 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Important desertions from the ranks of the striking longshoremen today encouraged the heads of the big steamship companies in the belief that the backbone of the struggle has been broken. The defections were by individuals and by bodies.

Two hundred men who walked out of the Pennsylvania Railroad's pier No. 27 for sympathy, grew tired after several days of idleness and the majority of them returned to work. The three hundred men who deserted the Fall River pier for a similar reason on Friday, went back in a body after their day of idleness. More strike breakers were put to work in Hoboken, Jersey City, Manhattan and Brooklyn than on any other day.

The North German Lloyd reported that it had its full complement of men. The Hamburg-American had nearly enough and expected to have the full number tomorrow. The Holland-American and the Scandinavian-American lines were equally favorable in their announcements.

On the Manhattan side such of the coastwise lines as did not come to some sort of an agreement like the Morse lines, Metropolitan, Clyde and others, had an army of men handling freight, many of them negroes brought up from the South, or Italians.

Big trans-Atlantic companies got more men than on any other day and expect more by Monday, but they were still short of the full number needed.

All this, however, did not appear to shake the confidence of Patrick Connors, head of the Executive Committee of the Longshoremen's Union in the outcome of the fight. He denied that his men had deserted or were deserting.

A group of men who had become restive as a result of the struggle, descended upon a gang of strike breakers at work upon the Italian line pier at the foot of West Thirty-fourth street today. The reserves from a near-by police station who were hurriedly summoned had their hands full before the fight was settled.

One of the strike breakers who were badly beaten and a number of others were hurt. Some arrests were made and immediately after quiet was restored, six of the strike breakers quit work.

Sticks and stones flew thick in the fight between a dozen strike breakers and a hundred striking 'longshoremen' at the foot of West Seventy-fourth street. Two of the strike breakers were injured. The police arrived upon the scene in the height of the battle and had to use their night sticks freely before they could quell the disturbance. The uniforms of several policemen were torn and their caps were knocked off in the fight. The street was finally cleared and the strikers dispersed. The Italians went on with their work with policemen standing guard over them.

LABOR BRIEFS.

Negroes as Strike-breakers.

PHILADELPHIA, May 11.—In answer to an advertisement posted along the entire Delaware River front, calling for "one thousand men at $3 a day, with board, lodging, transportation free, out of town work," nearly three hundred men, a majority of whom are negroes, have been secured in this city to take the places of the striking longshoremen of New York. At noon about one hundred men left for New York, and it is said another delegation will leave tonight.

Canadian Plumbers Strike.

TORONTO (Ont.) May 11.—About 450 journeymen plumbers last night decided to strike on Wednesday. They demand an increase of 7½ cents an hour.

No Compromise Possible.

DENVER (Colo.) May 11.—At a final conference tonight between the mill owners and the striking mill men of this city, it was made manifest that there was no middle ground on which the employers and the men could meet. The mill men accepted the offer of the mill owners in part, but insisted on a minimum wage scale of 38 cents an hour. Negotiations are at an end and it is now evident from the attitude assumed by the mill owners that the strike, which was called on May 1, must run its natural course.

KING EDWARD GETS ANGRY.

OBJECTS TO HOME SECRETARY'S ACTION ON "MIKADO."

Comic Opera Revival Had no Relation to Visit of Prince Fushimi, and the Edict of Government Officials Brought Forth General Public Indignation.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, May 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] King Edward is said to be very angry at the clouds of dust that have been raised over "The Mikado" during his absence, and has certainly made his Lord Chamberlain and the Home Secretary, Mr. Gladstone, look not a little foolish.

The Lord Chamberlain's order that the popular comic opera was to be struck off the list of licensed plays prior to the visit of Prince Fushimi and never again to be restored, out of respect to the feelings of Japanese allies of Great Britain, was received first by the public with incredulity followed by amusement, which gave place to intense indignation.

But it is not likely that the opera will be shelved forever, though the Lord Chamberlain will be permitted time to climb down gently, instead of coming a cropper.

King Edward has been very much annoyed at the ridiculous manner in which "The Mikado" affair has been conducted. It is true, in spite of official denials, that high Japanese authorities were greatly concerned at the revival of "The Mikado" at the Savoy Theater, practically coinciding with the visit of Prince Fushimi and representations on the matter were made to the government.

There would not have been the slightest difficulty had Mrs. D'Oyly-Carte been approached and the situation explained. Then the revival would have been delayed and the provincial performances would have been stopped temporarily without any explanation to the public.

NOT MAKING NEW TREATY.

TOKIO, May 11.—The report from Berlin that the United States and Japan were negotiating a treaty regarding interests in the Far East, is not quite accurate. It is explained that the matter being arranged is merely a demarkation of the respective rights of the two countries in the Philippines, Korea and Manchuria.

DYNAMITE WRECKS STREET CAR

MONTGOMERY (Ala.) May 11.—A street car in the extreme southern edge of the city struck a stick of dynamite last night, and was shattered, portions of the car being blown 100 feet from the track. The motorman and conductor were slightly injured. The only passenger upon the car, a negro, escaped unhurt.

Drilling for Oil.

T. H. Brewster, president of the Santa Monica Oil, Gas and Mining Company, will leave tomorrow for the oil fields, near the Malibu ranch, ten miles northeast of Santa Monica. He is going out to superintend the erection of an eighty-foot derrick and has let the contract to Delmore Bros. of Fullerton to drill. According to expert minerologists they will strike a gusher under 1000 feet deep being on a direct line of the Newhall and Los Angeles oil fields. All of the material for the drilling outfit is on the ground and Mr. Brewster will see that the drill is hit hard and often. He stated that nearly all of the allotment of stock at 25 cents a share is sold. The company owns all the mineral rights of 3200 acres and unless all signs fail their "future is before them." Their company is organized under the laws of Arizona and the stock is non-assessable. Santa Monica Oil, Gas and Mining Company, 313 Copp Bldg., 218 South Broadway.—[Adv.

Oldest Woman in the World

MRS. MARY McGRATH, 110 YEARS OLD.

Mrs. Mary McGrath, of Brandon, Wis., who is 110 years of age and the oldest woman in the world, says that when she takes Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey she feels so well she can walk a mile.

Mrs. McGrath says she tried several other medicines, which did her harm and finally used Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey as prescribed solely, which restored her to health and prolonged her life.

"I take pleasure in writing to you what a wonderful medicine your Malt Whiskey is. I am never tired of praising it, for it has done me so much good. While I was taking it I could go out and walk a mile. I have taken so many other kinds of medicines since I have been sick, and instead of improving me they did me harm. I know what Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey does for me, and I want no other medicine." Yours, Mrs. MARY M'GRATH, Brandon, Wis., December 18th, 1906.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is recognized as the best tonic stimulant in the world for both young and old.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

is distilled wholly from malted grain by a most expensive method which has never been made public, and this private process gives it great medicinal value and insures quality and flavor. Its age, softness, palatability and freedom from those injurious substances found in other whiskies make it acceptable to the most sensitive stomach.

It is an absolutely pure, gentle and invigorating stimulant and tonic. It acts as an antitoxin which destroys and drives out all disease germs, creates new nerve tissues, tones and strengthens the heart, gives power to the brain and elasticity to the muscles, enriches the blood and soothes and heals the mucous membranes. It brings into action all the vital forces. It makes digestion perfect, and enables you to get from the food you eat the nourishment it contains. It is invaluable for overworked men, delicate women, and sickly children. It strengthens the system, is a promoter of health and longevity, makes the old young, and keeps the young strong. Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is a form of food already digested, and is recognized as a medicine everywhere.

CAUTION—Sold by all druggists, grocers and dealers, or direct, in sealed bottles only, never in bulk. Price $1. Insist on the genuine and see that the "Old Chemist" trade-mark is on the label and that the seal over the cork is unbroken. Beware of refilled bottles and spurious malt whiskey substitutes offered for sale by unreliable dealers. They are positively harmful and will not cure. ONCE OWNED VAST GRANT.

Was Richest Woman in All California.

Dona Vicenta Sepulveda de Carrillo Is Dead.

Was Famous as a Beauty of the Early Days.

Death has claimed one of the oldest members of a well-known Spanish-American house, Doña Vicenta Sepulveda de Carrillo, aged 94 years. She was laid to rest in the cemetery at Anaheim yesterday, her grandchildren, Fred Smythe, Robert Rimpau, John Kirby, Claude Carrillo and Frank and Augustine Bernard, acting as pallbearers.

The death of this aged lady was very sudden. Despite her years she had retained her faculties to a remarkable degree, and was up and about the home of her daughter, Mrs. Adolpho Rimpau, at Anaheim, the day before she died. A short time before her death she complained of a pain in her heart, and within a very few moments she had passed away, on Wednesday morning, May 8.

The funeral services were held in St. Boniface Catholic Church at Anaheim, Rev. Father Dubel officiating. The church was filled with relatives and friends of the family from many parts of Southern California.

The deceased was the daughter of Don Francisco Sepulveda, who came when a child from Sinaloa, Mex., in 1780, being one of a colony brought to Mission San Gabriel by the mission fathers.

Señorita Sepulveda was married in 1834 to Don Tomas Yorba, whose parents were granted the Santiago de Santa Ana Rancho, now in Orange county, consisting of 62,000 acres. This grant was made by the Spanish Crown in 1809. In those days the grants were given in the name of two families, and this grant was shared by the Yorba and Peralta families.

Tomas Yorba died twelve years after this marriage, at the famous Yorba rancho, and two years later the widow was married to Ramon Carrillo, who died about forty-five years ago.

Señora Carrillo was the mother of eleven children, all living, and all but one married and with families. There are seventy grandchildren, who are all residing in Southern California.

Her children are Antonia Yorba, whose home is at Yorba; Mrs. John Smythe of No. 958 Court Circle; Mrs. Juan de la Guerra of Yorba; Ramon Carrillo of San Francisco; Mrs. Robert Harris of Oakland; Mrs. Louis Linott of San Gabriel, Mrs. Fred Alvarado of Leon, Guatemala, Central America; Clodimiro Carrillo of Yorba, Mrs. Lawrence Kirby of Bonnie Brae street, Los Angeles; Mrs. Adolpho Rimpau of Anaheim, and Garribaldi Carrillo of San Juan Capistrano.

At one time Señora Carrillo was one of the richest women of Southern California, as she came into possession of a principality. But, like so many of the Spanish-American families, the Carrillos allowed their vast possessions to slip away from them, the newcomers getting the better of them because of their open-hearted hospitality and generosity and their haughty disinclination to turn everything to account in the accumulation of dollars and cents.

Señora Carrillo for many years dispensed her charities to the unfortunates, and they always looked to her for help in their distress. Her last years were spent with the various sons and daughters, much of the time being with her daughters in Los Angeles.

Her acquaintance was widespread throughout the State. In early years she was a notable beauty, and many were the festive and social occasions wherein she was the leading spirit. At the Yorba rancho, also, have been gathered many brilliant assemblages, and there, under the hospitality extended by this woman, have occurred conferences of men whose names are linked with California affairs and who helped make the history of this southern coast.

ONE OF FINEST IN THE WORLD.

JEVNE'S NEW ESTABLISHMENT OPENED TO PUBLIC.

From Basement to Roof Nothing Is Overlooked That Can Add to Beauty or Utility—Decorations in the Art Nouveau—Mosaics, Mahogany and Bronze Used Lavishly.

Yesterday the H. Jevne Company's new six-story building, at Sixth street and Broadway, was formally thrown open to the public. For weeks an army of workmen had been rushing along the finishing work, and Friday this was completed.

The new building is undoubtedly one of the finest mercantile establishments in the world. In fitting it up nothing was overlooked that would add to the beauty or convenience of the store, and from the basement to the top floor everything is as complete as it could be made.

The ground floor is given up entirely to the retail department. Staple and fancy groceries, wines, liquors and cigars, baked goods, candies and delicacies have their own departments. The floor itself is of tile mosaics, while the woodwork is of the finest mahogany. The window glass is the choicest plate.

The decorations are all in the art nouveau, the chandeliers being of wrought bronze. The gratings around the cashiers' desks are of the same material and are designed with exquisite taste.

The offices are located on a mezzanine balcony at the back of the store and are finished in mahogany, like the ground-floor salesroom.

The different departments are equipped with a system of pneumatic tubes for the transmission of papers, an innovation in the West. By these tubes it is possible for the executive officers to keep in touch with every department.

The basement is used as the liquor cellar and cigar humidor. The humidor is constructed upon a new plan by which an even temperature and atmosphere is assured.

The back portion of the second floor is devoted to the city delivery department. Here the orders are made up and delivered to two large freight elevators which transport them to the floor below, where they are loaded into the waiting wagons. The front part of this floor is fitted up as a showroom for the wholesale department, with glass cases for the display of wares which are handled in wholesale quantities.

The third and fourth floors are devoted entirely to the storage of grocery stock and so arranged that any part of the stock can be reached at a moment's notice, while the large windows guarantee a sufficient supply of fresh air and light.

On the fifth floor are the household goods and tea and coffee departments. A complete plant of the newest model is provided for the roasting of coffee, and storage facilities are at hand whereby the goods are guaranteed the greatest keeping qualities.

The kitchens and candy factory are also located on the fifth floor. In the kitchens are large ranges for the preparation of the salads and cooked meats which are sold in the delicacy department. The candy factory, which occupies a division by itself, is especially tempting. With plenty of light and an abundance of fresh air, the factory can easily be kept in a condition of spotless cleanliness.

The sixth floor is entirely given up to the bakery. The three great ovens in this department have a daily capacity of 36,000 loaves. They are constructed upon an entirely new principle whereby the temperature can always be kept at an even standard.

Particular attention has been given in the cooking and baking departments to the sanitary arrangements. Every loaf of bread that comes out of the bakery is handled only by machinery, and uncleanliness is a practical impossibility.

The seven stories of the building have a total of 100,000 square feet of floor space. One passenger elevator, two freight elevators, and electric, automatic dumb waiters connect the different floors and make it possible to send goods from one department to another with the greatest facility.

It has been the aim to get all of the departments under one roof in order to facilitate handling, and with this end in view the present quarters were secured. Nevertheless, the old store will not be relinquished, but will be retained for a portion of the retail trade.

The H. Jevne Company is one of the oldest business concerns in Los Angeles. It was established in 1882 in a small store at No. 136 North Spring street. In 1894 the business was moved to the Wilcox building, where a store was fitted up which was then considered the finest grocery establishment in America. In 1905 the business was incorporated under its present name.

FIESTA NUMBER BREAKS RECORD.

BEAUTIFUL SPECIAL EDITION OF "THE TIMES" SELLS FAST.

Newsboys Pass Papers Out in Quick Succession to Eager Buyers and Mails Are Loaded Down With Thousands of Copies Addressed to Every Quarter of the Globe.

All past records for special newspaper editions were excelled yesterday by the sale of the exquisite Fiesta Number of The Times, with its wealth of detail and profusion of beautiful pictures of the event of the gay week just closed. Into the mails there went thousands upon thousands of copies, each in its bright art cover, addressed to all quarters of the globe, carrying to those far away a perfect pen and pencil portrayal of all that had been placed before the multitudes who were so fortunate as to be spectators.

The sales began before 6 o'clock yesterday morning. By daylight the "newsies" had lined up at The Times office, eagerly awaiting their opportunity to secure a supply of the papers, which their past experience had taught them would sell quickly. The lads were loaded down with all they could carry, and at once began a brisk business on the downtown and residence streets.

The circulation department of The Times undertook to assist the street sellers by carrying out wagonloads of the popular edition, but before the route was half completed the supplies were exhausted and a return for new supplies was found necessary.

Calls came from the hotels and news stands, time after time, and first orders were several times duplicated at the depots, where every departing Shriner added to his luggage all of the copies of the Fiesta number that he could carry.

At the "Made in Southern California Exposition," copies of the edition were piled many feet high against the walls, but before the day was over the pile had melted away. Stacks of the papers, addressed and stamped were to be seen at every mailbox, and in some places many extra trips had to be made by the postman during the day to gather in the copies which Uncle Sam will have to carry.

A second edition of this charming number tomorrow, so that accumulating orders can be filled without delay.

LORETA-STREET SCHOOL.

New Flag Floats Over the Building and a Child-study Circle Is Organized.

The Loreta-street school held impressive flag-raising exercises on Thursday afternoon. The children of the school purchased a handsome new flag to be floated over the building, and it was accepted by Superintendent Moore and Assistant Superintendent Bettinger. It was hauled to the masthead, while the school sang a patriotic song. The history of our flag was given by children of the third grade, and illustrated by the different flags from the birth of the nation. The fourth and fifth grades sang patriotic songs and Roland Lytle recited "Our Old Flag Forever."

Following the flag-raising, a Child-Study Circle was organized by Mrs. A. B. Glass, State secretary. Mrs. Glass was elected president; Mrs. A. K. Smith, secretary; Mrs. O. Wilke, treasurer, and delegates were chosen to represent it in the Congress now in session in this city.

ROBBED BY TWO HIGHWAYMEN.

Peter Timm of No. 1405 East Eighth street was held up last night by two masked men on Central avenue between First and Second street and robbed of a $500 certified check and $37.50. The robbers did not take Timm's watch or jewelry, but only searched for money. When Timm met the highwaymen he was proceeding south on Central avenue. One of the men approached and asked him for a match. At that the other man leaped upon him. After the robbers secured the money they dashed north on Central avenue.

LOSES DRAFTS.

William Mackin of No. 540 Ruth avenue reported to the police that he lost a letter containing two drafts, one for $150 and another for $2060, at Venice last night. Whether his pockets were picked Mackin could not say.

Mrs. Samuelson, wife of Deputy Chief Clarence F. Samuelson of the Manila fire department, is in Los Angeles on a visit and is residing at No. 134 Avenue 54, East Highland Park.

PROMISES TO REVEAL MURDER CONSPIRACY.

Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone Are Organizers of "Inner Circle," Pledged to Slay All Opponents of Unionism In Western States.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BOISE (Idaho) May 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] When the prosecution opens its case in the trial of W. D. Haywood it promises to reveal a story of crime and bloodshed that will startle the country. According to the attorneys who are in possession of all the facts, the criminal conspiracy which will be unfolded will outrival in dramatic interest any dime novel ever published dealing with crime. While the Sheriff is searching the county for men to fill the special venire ordered, the prosecution is busy at work outlining its case. The Sheriff today said that he would have a full venire on hand when court convenes Monday afternoon and that there will be no further delay so far as he is concerned.

Senator Borah today outlined in a general way what the prosecution expects to prove. The State will endeavor to bring out that the criminal conspiracy has existed since 1899, and that the killing of Frank Steunenberg was but an incident in the conspiracy. It hopes to show through the testimony of a large number of witnesses that there existed within the ranks of the Western Federation of Miners, an "inner circle," which was organized for the purpose of killing all who opposed the sway of the union.

RELY ON CONFESSION.

As soon as a jury is procured the State will outline its case and introduce a number of minor witnesses from Cañon county to prove that Gov. Steunenberg was actually assassinated. After that fact has been established, Harry Orchard will be placed on the witness stand to relate in court what he has already admitted through his confession. The confession of Orchard covers sixty typewritten pages and gives details of the working of the "inner circle" since its inception. The confession itself cannot be introduced as evidence and the State is relying on Orchard relating substantially the same story on the witness stand. The attorneys declare that there is no possibility of his weakening under cross-examination and it is on his evidence that they hope to get a conviction.

Although Haywood is on trial charged directly with the murder of Steunenberg, the State expects to go much deeper into the subject. Three-fourths of the witnesses to be called know little, if anything, of the Steunenberg murder, but they know of other crimes which have been committed in the last eight years which tend to prove that a conspiracy to commit wholesale murder exists. This testimony is expected to furnish strong circumstantial evidence that the murder of Steunenberg was part of a plot deliberately planned by the defendant and his associates.

KEEP DETAILS SECRET.

The details of the Orchard confession and of the specific crimes which the prosecution expects to show are being kept secret, because it would be difficult to obtain witnesses if such details were published. Senator Borah said today that most of the witnesses were to be brought here from Colorado where the feeling for or against the defendant is more pronounced than here and for that reason he would not give out details until the witnesses were actually placed on the stand. He appeared confident that the case against the defendant is strong enough to obtain a conviction.

Clarence Darrow, attorney for the defense, is receiving letters from all parts of the earth showing the interest being taken in the case, while there is not the slightest excitement here. Today he received a letter from an attorney in Vermont severely scoring the President for his interference in the trial.

An interesting development of today was the service of a subpoena by the prosecution on Acting Secretary-Treasurer Kerwin, of the Western Federation of Miners. Kerwin had been in the city several days consulting with the prisoners with regard to union affairs and the approaching meeting of the federation in Denver on June 10. Kerwin said he expected that he might be called as a witness for the defense if the prosecution developed any point upon which his testimony was needed.

HAS NO DOUBT IT WAS MOYER.

PINKERTON HAS HELD PROOFS FOR MANY MONTHS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, May 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] There is no doubt in the mind of William Pinkerton, head of the big detective agency, that the Moyer who served time in Joliet and Charles H. Moyer, president of the Western Federation of Miners, now on trial for the murder of Gov. Frank Steunenberg, are one and the same.

He declared his office has had the facts regarding Moyer for nearly a year and believed they had them carefully concealed for use if necessary at the trial. The man who gathered Moyer's record is Detective James McPartland, the one who extracted the confession from Orchard implicating Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone in the conspiracy to murder. All the necessary evidence to prove that Charles H. Moyer and Moyer, the cowboy, are the same is in his possession.

"I am surprised that the story has become public," declared Mr. Pinkerton, "for we have been very careful to keep the knowledge we have gained a secret. The story cannot be used in the trial as competent evidence unless Moyer is placed on the stand, or unless character witnesses are called. With the story public his attorneys are, of course, forewarned and may render it valueless to the prosecution."

OLD PHOTOGRAPH FOUND.

The most convincing proof of the identity of the two men is shown in a picture obtained from Moyer's sister at Boone, Iowa, which shows Moyer and a woman who has been positively identified as a sister of John Keating, who was arrested with him and also sent to Joliet.

During Moyer's stay in Chicago, he was known as the sweetheart of Keating's sister, and the picture would tend to prove the truth of the report.

According to the Pinkertons, the president of the Western Federation has a bullet wound in his hand the same as has "Cowboy Charlie Moyer."

Diligent inquiry at Rockford, the mining town in South Dakota, where Moyer claims he was working during 1886, fails to locate any who knew him.

The earliest history of Moyer in the Black Hills was in 1890, and it is claimed that he was one of the leaders in the Annie Creek strike of 1893, when an English mining company closed up its business and left the country because of labor troubles.

NOT KNOWN AT ROCKFORD. MOYER'S CLAIM UNSUPPORTED.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

OMAHA (Neb.) May 11.—Diligent inquiry fails to locate any one in Lead, S. D., who knew Charles H. Moyer in 1886, at the time, it is alleged, that he was in the Joliet penitentiary.

The man who was postmaster at Rockford, in 1886, where Moyer asserts he was employed for a mining company at that time, is dead, and the old-time hotelkeeper of that mining camp says he never knew that Moyer was a resident of that vicinity at any time.

No one identified with the management of the Annie Creek Gold Company is now a resident of this section, as the company has been long out of existence and the records have been destroyed.

PETTIBONE IS ALSO JAILBIRD.

SERVED TIME AS CONVICT IN DETROIT REFORMATORY.

Laborite Leader, Accused of Complicity in Murder of Former Gov. Steunenberg, Was Sentenced for Inciting Outrages by Union Mob During Coeur d'Alene Riots.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DETROIT (Mich.) May 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] George A. Pettibone, indicted with Moyer and Haywood of the Western Federation of Miners, for complicity in the assassination of Gov. Steunenberg of Idaho was a convict in the Detroit House of Correction for several months in 1892-3.

Pettibone was a leader of the miners who rioted at Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, during 1892. A Federal injunction had been secured restraining the miners from interfering with the non-union workmen.

An armed mob, of which Pettibone was the leader, attacked one of the mines where the strike breakers were working and fully one thousand shots were exchanged.

Then the strikers began to run short of ammunition, and Pettibone and others, it was charged, made a detour to the powder shed, broke it open and took 200 pounds of dynamite to the top of a 500-foot chute leading into the besieged mine building. The dynamite was given a push down the mine chute and when it struck the bottom there was an awful crash and the whole mine was blown up. Pettibone, who was standing at the top of the chute was badly hurt.

Pettibone was arrested, tried in the United States District Court of Idaho and sentenced to serve two years in the Detroit House of Correction.

The three other prisoners who were convicted of the same offense were C. Sinclair, Michael L. Devine and John Murphy. They were each sentenced to serve eighteen months.

The quartette began to serve their sentence on October 21, 1892, and were released March 18, the following year, the United States Supreme Court having ordered them discharged.

FARMERS TO BE USED ON JURY.

COUNSEL BELIEVE THIS PANEL WILL BE ENOUGH.

Acting Secretary Kerwin of Miners' Federation Subpoenaed by Telegraph as Witness for Prosecution. He Had Expected to Be Called by the Defense.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

BOISE, (Idaho.) May 11.—Sheriff "Shad" Hodgin and seven of his deputies continued today to serve the farmers of Ada county with notice to appear in Boise next Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, to be examined as possible jurors in the case of William D. Haywood, secretary-treasurer of the Western Federation of Miners, who is on trial for complicity in the death of former Governor Steunenberg.

Altogether 100 men will be in attendance Monday afternoon for jury duty. It is the opinion of both prosecution and defense that twelve men will surely be qualified from this special panel. Witnesses for the prosecution have been notified to be in court next Friday morning. This indicates the belief that the trial panel will have been sworn in by that time.

An interesting development of the case today was the service of a subpoena by the prosecution upon Acting-Secretary Kerwin of the Western Federation of Miners. Mr. Kerwin has been in the city several days, consulting with the prisoners with regard to union affairs and the approaching meeting of the Federation in Denver on June 10. Kerwin stated that he expected he might be called as a witness for the defense, if the prosecution developed any point upon which his testimony was needed.

The attorneys for the State decided today to summon Kerwin as one of their witnesses. The Federation official had started back to Denver, however, before the deputy sheriff reached him. The subpoena was telegraphed ahead and served at a point near the Idaho line. Kerwin, it is said, expressed his willingness to return whenever needed. His business relations with the prisoners, he also announced would require his presence in Boise from time to time.

WILL WED AT MIDNIGHT.

Mabelle Gilman Makes an Announcement—Corey's Business Associates to Attend the Ceremony.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, May 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mabelle Gilman announced today in cards to her friends that the ceremony which will make her the wife of Millionaire William Ellis Corey is to take place in the royal suite of the Hotel Gotham, about midnight on Monday next.

Ten associates of the head of the United States Steel Corporation will attend, and their presence is expected to mark the marriage with the approval of Mr. Corey's business confreres. The thirty guests will sit down to an elaborate supper, which is to cost $5000.

According to members of the Gilman family, there will be represented every branch of the Corey family, and old Braddock, Pa., friends of the bridegroom will be present.

The name of the clergyman, if the ceremony is to be a religious one, has been kept secret. Mr. Corey will have as his best man a near relative, and Miss Mary Shaw, an English friend of one of Miss Gilman's sisters, will be the bridesmaid.

Miss Gilman's friends assert that the steel man's wedding present in jewelry and steel stock has passed the $1,000,000-mark to date, her trousseau, purchased in Paris, having cost $35,000, and fills ten large trunks, besides hat and shoe cases.

CHICAGO CHARTER PASSED.

CHICAGO, May 11.—The charter bill, which today passed the Legislature, will give the city much needed relief. For many years Chicago has been hampered by a charter designed for a city of not more than 500,000 inhabitants. It has at times been impossible for the city under its charter provisions to borrow money for urgent current requirements, although bankers were eager to lend the money, because the lawful limit of debt had been reached. Local improvements of all kinds have been retarded or dropped altogether owing to this condition.

$50,000.00 Worth of Ready-to-Wear Merchandise

Bought at 50c to 65c on the Dollar for Our Great

THIRTY-SECOND ANNIVERSARY SALE Established 1875

The Biggest Sales Week on Our Great Third Floor

For months we have striven to get merchandise of merit, at concessions in price, for this great sale. Weather conditions throughout the Eastern states was decidedly in our favor. Prolonged winter caused almost a panic among the manufacturers of ready-to-wear goods. Caught with thousands of garments made up, and with hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of material awaiting orders, the outlook was anything but promising. They held on to the limit, but finally were forced to scurry around and unload at ruinous prices. Our favored climate is responsible for the optimism of our clever New York buyer. With plenty of cash at his disposal, he bought right and left, filling our Great Third Floor with ready-to-wear garments of all kinds at the lowest prices ever paid for new, freshly made-up women's wear.

Los Angeles County—Its Cities and Towns.

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

TO FIGHT FOR CHAMPIONSHIP.

IN HONOR'S CAUSE FOILS WILL STRIKE FIRE.

Dr. Lee Deming and B. O. Kendall Are Scheduled for Bout—Funeral of Maj. Meyers Tomorrow—Mrs. Burdette's Arm Reset—Dean of Throop Made Acting President.

Office of The Times, No. 26 S. Raymond Ave.

PASADENA, May 12.—Arrangements were completed yesterday afternoon for the bout on May 25 between Dr. Lee C. Deming and B. O. Kendall of this city for the amateur fencing championship of Southern California. The championship was won by Mr. Kendall when he captured the cup put up for the best fencer in the Southland amateur school a month ago.

Since that bout challenges have been flying thick and fast and Los Angeles men have ben sending in a few of them. Warde Heller of the D'Artagnan Club of Los Angeles challenged Mr. Kendall for a bout to decide which was the better man. The challenge was accepted and it was thought the struggle would take place in the near future, but Mr. Heller retired today when he found that there were only two weeks in which to train.

Prof. Harry Maloney, who has charge of the Pasadena Fencing Club, and whose tutoring has created such efficiency among the members, is going to France, where he will meet some of the fencing masters of the continent. In order to have the bout here take place before his departure, it had to come off within the next two weeks.

Mr. Heller stated that he would renew his challenge when Prof. Maloney returned from Europe, on the first of October.

Dr. Lee C. Deming sent in his challenge on the day following the bout in which Mr. Kendall was declared the victor. In the preliminary bouts of the tournament Mr. Kendall was pitted against Dr. Deming and the match was a close one.

Pasadena claims another championship and it was thought that the bout for the amateur championship could occur in conjunction with a second bout which would determine the professional championship. While the challenges were flying among the amateurs there were others sent to the professional champion, Harry Maloney.

Prof. Maloney's right to the title was questioned and he immediately sought to settle the matter by challenging any professional fencer in Southern California to meet him with the foils at any time.

The bout between Dr. Deming and Mr. Kendall will be interesting to followers of the game of thrust and parry as each has an entirely different mode of fighting. Mr. Kendall assumes a stolid defense and resorts almost exclusively to the use of the arm thrust, instead of the body lunge. Dr. Deming is lithe and aggressive and quick with his blade. The bout will be held in the Maloney gymnasium.

BREAKBEAM TOURIST.

John Moore attempted to take forceful possession of the Hotel Raymond yesterday afternoon. He was the last tourist of the season, having been delayed by several transfers from brakebeams, but he was none the less enthusiastic over the magnificent view from Raymond Hill and was desirous of mounting to the roof of the hotel, that he might the better observe the contour of rugged mountain peaks. In a hand-to-hand scuffle with a caretaker, John was subdued and later lodged in jail on a charge of disturbing the peace.

FUNERAL OF MAJ. MYERS.

The funeral of Maj. Andrew G. Myers, who died here Friday, will be held at All Saints' Episcopal Church Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Private services will also be held at the family residence, No. 333 East Walnut street. The funeral was postponed from Sunday in order that members of the Loyal Legion might attend, and honorary pallbearers are to be chosen from this organization. The active pallbearers will include representatives from All Saints' Church, the Episcopalian Men's Club and the Board of Trade. Maj. Myers was the beloved secretary of the Men's Club and under his care that organization has prospered until it is one of the largest of its kind in the United States. His loss is deeply felt.

DEAN CHAMBERLAIN HONORED.

Dean Arthur H. Chamberlain was tendered the acting presidency of Throop Polytechnic Institute at a meeting of the board of trustees of that institution Friday night. The committee having the matter in charge consisted of Dr. Norman Bridge, C. D. Daggett, John Wadsworth and C. J. Willet. At the close of the present school year, when the term of the retiring president, W. A. Edwards, ends, Dean Chamberlain will assume his duties. It has been definitely decided to make the institute to the Pacific Coast what the Massachusetts Institute of Technology is to the Atlantic. To that end the following resolutions were adopted:

"Whereas, the board of trustees of Throop Polytechnic Institute has ordered that the elementary school be removed from its present quarters before the beginning of the next school year;

"Resolved, that the parties interested be invited to form a corporation for the purpose of taking over the elementary school of the institute, the same to be approved by the trustees of Throop, and to provide for carrying on the work in substantially the same manner as in the past, and to constitute an affiliated school to Throop Institute, with a course of instruction satisfactory to its faculty."

PASADENA NOTES.

John C. FitzGerald, ex-City Attorney of Pasadena, who has been at death's door as the result of a stroke of apoplexy, is improving. His physician, Dr. Henry Sherry, states, however, that it can hardly be said that Mr. FitzGerald is yet out of danger.

A second ex-ray examination has been made of the fractured elbow of Mrs. Robert J. Burdette, and it was found necessary to remove the cast and reset the arm. It is stated by her physicians that Mrs. Burdette has suffered a serious shock as the result of the painful accident and that her recovery will be slow. The cap bone of the elbow was broken and it can not be said at this time whether she will regain the use of her arm.

At 3 o'clock this afternoon the men's meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association, in conjunction with a meeting of the Christian Endeavor Union of this city, will be held in Central Park. The Y.M.C.A. Glee Club will furnish the music.

Directors of the Valley Hunt Club will select plans for a new clubhouse at a meeting Tuesday night.

Christian Endeavor societies of all the religious dominations of this city will hold a convention, rally and banquet in the supper rooms of the First Congregational Church Tuesday evening. The contest of the evening will be the selection of a delegate to represent Pasadena Christian Endeavors at the national convention at Seattle in July.

BOOSTS ROAD BONDS.

Long Beach Association Working Hard in Interest of the Movement.

LONG BEACH, May 11.—The Long Beach Good Roads Association is working hard in the interest of improvement for the county roads. Already 800 names have been secured to the petition which is to be presented to the Board of Supervisors on Tuesday of next week, asking that an election be called on the question of a bond issue for road improvement in the county. The local association met again this afternoon in the interest of the movement.

Herman Fink and James Wilson were discharged from the custody of the local police this morning. The two men were arrested Thursday, just after noon, on a charge of having picked the pocket of W. J. Bloss, a wealthy visitor from Pittsburgh, Pa. After investigating the matter Marshal Young decided that there was not enough evidence to hold the two. Detective A. P. Winters of Redlands arrested the two men and declares that he can positively identify Fink as a notorious crook.

The funeral of Dr. A. R. Rhea will be held at 2:30 o'clock Sunday at the Presbyterian Church. Dr. Rhea died yesterday, a few minutes after being struck and severely injured by a Pacific Electric car. He was at one time surgeon for the Santa Fé Railroad in Los Angeles. A widow, two sons and one daughter are left. All are residents of Long Beach.

Work on the tunnel being projected under Pine avenue from Ocean avenue to First street, has proceeded twenty-four feet through hard-pan as it is being built twenty-five feet below the level of the street. Electric lights are installed as the workmen proceed and a number of electric fans are used to keep the air in circulation. The tunnel will be used to carry power from a plant on the beach to the nearly completed, six-story First National Bank building at First and Pine streets.

A permit was issued this morning for a $40,000 residence to be erected at No. 1800 East Ocean avenue by A. D. Meyers, a millionaire mining man from Nevada. The excavation for the basement is 40x90 feet in area and includes a hole for a good sized plunge bath. The builder is Capt. S. L. Strickland.

W. Horace Austin of this city, who is at present a student at the University of Pennsylvania, taking a course in architecture, has been elected to the Argicultural Society of the University, a mark of distinction rarely succeeded to by the undergraduate, he being one of the two selected from a class of 100.

Capt. Nelson Bowerman, assistant postmaster at the Home, was elected vice-president of the Wisconsin Association of Southern California.

The seventh concert of the Home Orchestra took place in Memorial Hall on Thursday evening. While every number on the programme was good, several encores were responded to. A zither solo, "Heimweh," as rendered by Fred Dickley, a newcomer in the band, caught the particular fancy of the veteran audience.

A holiday on Friday by the indulgence of the Governor afforded employés an opportunity to enjoy the great Fiesta parade in Los Angeles. Hundreds of veterans also attended.

Rev. J. Bell of Buffalo, N. Y., will preach in the Protestant Chapel at 10 a.m. Sunday.

WEDDING AT DUARTE.

DUARTE, May 11.—A pleasant consummation of a real love affair took place when Miss Bertha Boden became the wife of Leo Dapron. Both are prominent in religious and social circles. Rev. E. D. Cady of the Methodist Church performed the ceremony. The bride was attired in a white s... gown trimmed with lace and carried a bouquet of white pinks. The couple stood beneath a canopy of pink rose buds, while all about them were decorations of pink and white, artistically arranged. The ceremony ended, the bride showered the guests with the bouquet she carried.

ROBS METERS BY WHOLESALE.

BURGLAR TACKLES GAS DEVICES IN SANTA MONICA.

Beats Collector on His Rounds to Over a Hundred and Fifty of Them. Police Officers Prosecute a Vigorous Search for the Miscreant, but Fail to Locate Him.

SANTA MONICA, May 11.—With apparently no prospects of success, the police officers are prosecuting a vigorous search for the one lone man who has found it possible to beat the gas meters at their own game. This fellow's entire tool-kit consists of a little monkey wrench with which he has been twisting the padlocks off the cash-in-the-slot meters. Before his game was discovered by the collector of coin for the Edison Electric Company, the thief had found his way into the cash boxes of at least 150 of these meters.

The ones he assaulted had been placed, for the sake of convenience to the collector, on back porches or other easily accessible places. When the collector for the company started on his monthly rounds, he discovered that some one had been just ahead of him.

It is estimated that the robber of the gas-measuring machines got away with at least $500 of the company's money, as the readings of the robbed meters show that gas has been used to the amount of from $1 to $15 by every consumer whose recording instrument was burglarized.

SEASHORE SAYINGS.

Postal Inspector Hall has practically accepted the site proposed for the new building that is to be built for the accommodation of the Santa Monica post-office. The building is to be erected on Oregon avenue, near the alley between Third and Fourth streets, on the site now utilized by the fire company as an engine-house.

Burglars last night took advantage of the absence of residents and burglarized several homes. The houses of D. A. Hamburger and F. E. Bundy were entered, but nothing of value was taken.

The Seal Gardens are coming from Los Angeles tomorrow to play a game of baseball with the Santa Monica team.

A petition is in circulation among the property owners asking that Ocean avenue and San Vincente Way be declared boulevards, in the eye of the law. The object of this is to protect the oiled thoroughfares by diverting the heavily loaded gravel and other wagons to some other street.

George F. Doty will resign the cashiership of the Merchants' National Bank, and go to Los Angeles, where he is to fill the same position in the Bank of Los Angeles.

According to the report of the expert accountont who has just concluded his examination of the books and records of the city officials, Santa Monica has a bonded indebtedness of $177,000.

"Hotel del Coronado" will please you.

AVALON.

AVALON, May 11.—Two Catalina women have recently turned their attention to mining and according to the reports which drift in they have a good prospect of becoming wealthy through their venture. They are Mrs. Moore, wife of Col. A. S. Moore, of Willow Cove, about seven miles up the island coast, and Miss Kate Robe of Avalon. They are working a group of gold mines adjoining the property of the Victor Gold Mines Company, owned by C. W. Mitchell and associates and they are on the same veins with the Victor company, some of which are ten feet wide and assay over $100 per ton in gold. Their property is known as the Catalina group and they are now sinking a shaft on the Willow Cove claim.

The Jonathan is the latest addition to the Catalina fleet. It is another of the eastern model yachts which are becoming popular out here and is similar in style to E. H. Brewster's crack yacht which was launched a few weeks since. It was built by Al. Larson of San Pedro and is thirty-two feet long and seven feet of beam with a fifteen horse-power engine which develops a speed of ten miles an hour. The Jonathan was designed by C. D. Mower of New York and is fitted with cabin for cruising or fishing.

The twenty new glass bottom boats built for the Santa Catalina Island Company which arrived a few days since were just in the nick of time to care for the great crowds of Shriners and others who are thronging to the island.

The Cabrillo was loaded almost to her limit this morning and the Hermosa, which arrives at 5:45 p.m. daily now, will bring another contingent of several hundred, and this, supplemented by the regular Saturday night boat at 8:30 o'clock, will give Avalon a midsummer appearance. A single New York party of 150 people registered at the Metropole for a three-days' stay.

Fiesta and the Banning injunction suit coming the same week fitted in very nicely for some thirty or forty Avalon residents who were compelled to be in Los Angeles this week as witnesses.

POMONA, May 11.—The Sunday-school and Bible classes of Pilgrim Congregational Church enjoyed a picnic in Live Oak Cañon today. A bounteous basket luncheon was served and out-of-door sports and games were indulged in.

Frank W. Balfour and Norris H. Wilkinson have gone to San Francisco to attend the convention of the Knights of Columbus.

The ladies of the Pomona Ebell Club are making plans for a permanent home.

Frank P. Frey has purchased of H. L. Armstrong the sixteen-acre orange grove on West Orange Grove avenue for a reported consideration of $16,500. Mr. Armstrong intends to go into business in the Northwest.

Several parties have, during the past year, endeavored to purchase the post-office block on Second street from E. E. Marshall. He has recently received another offer, which is a substantial increase over previous ones.

HARBOR PLANNED FOR NEWPORT.

MAY UTILIZE HUGE INLAND BAY AS PORT.

Government Asked for Aid in Building Jetties and Removing Bar at Entrance—Local and Eastern Capital Interested—Electric Railway in Scheme Also.

Port Orange is the name chosen for the proposed free harbor, which a company of local capitalists plan to build at Newport Bay. Intense interest has been aroused in the surrounding country affected by the establishment of such a port. Efforts are being made to induce the Rivers and Harbors Committee of Congress to take the matter up and recommend an appropriation by the next Congress for the purpose of having a complete survey made.

The land surrounding the bay is, and has been, controlled by James Irvine and his father, for many years, having been obtained by the Irvine family through a Spanish grant years ago. Eugene Germain, the local seed man, has secured a large tract of land opposite the inlet to the bay, and a company of local and eastern capitalists has been formed for the purpose of developing the project. In the company are James Irvine, who controls the land. He retains a considerable interest in the tract affected, and a right of dictating the policy of the concern. Eugene Germain, through his son, M. L. Germain, also is in it. C. L. Frederick and G. H. McCartey, both of the First National Bank of Duluth, Minn., represent considerable eastern capital.

It is the purpose to ask the government for an appropriation for the purpose of removing the bar at the entrance to the bay, and for the construction of two jetties, extending seaward, to keep the channel open, once the bar is removed. Estimates have been variously placed on this work as between $500,000 and $1,500,000, by the local representative of the engineering staff of the government service.

The cost of the construction of the necessary dockage, dredging the bay, and making the turning basis, will be borne by the company that is urging the proposition. Incident to the harbor, a townsite named Port Orange has been laid out.

The bay at present has an average depth of six feet. The dredging out of between fifteen and twenty feet will be necessary to accommodate ocean-going vessels, but this, it is said, will be done.

The claims advanced by the exponents of this harbor proposition are that it is the logical shipping point for a vast area of the Southwest; that between 150,000 and 250,000 people will be served through it, and that by the new electric railways it will be nearer the city of Los Angeles than the present port now is; that it offers a safer refuge for vessels, coming either up or going down the coast, than any harbor between San Diego and San Francisco.

A broad-gauge, double-track electric railway will be built from Port Orange townsite to Santa Ana, according to the statements made by the company. This road will accommodate regular-size freight and passenger cars, and will connect with the transcontinental and inland lines at Santa Ana.

With the opening of the Panama Canal, the promoters hope the new harbor will be ready to receive the great amount of trade which Southern California is sure to send, via the water route, to New York and other eastern ports.

MONROVIA.

MONROVIA, May 11.—This was to have been "Children's Day" with the Saturday Afternoon Club, but instead, it was made "Art Day," with Mrs. Florence Collins Porter, president of the district federation, as chief speaker. Her address was principally on Russian lace and hundreds of women were present to hear her. She showed beautifully specimens of lace. Saturday next will be devoted to the children.

Homer E. Barga was injured yesterday while riding a motor cycle. He was returning from San Bernardino in company with Jesse Wilson when his cycle got out of order. He secured a rope and hitched the wheel to the one ridden by Wilson. Unfortunately they encountered a ditch. Wilson saw it in time to prevent running into it, but Barka was given a hard plunge. His wrist was severely sprained and his arm bady wrenched.

Regarding the Hotel Redburn, Mr. Redburn says: "Arrangements are progressing favorably, but the plans have not been returned by the prospective lessee from the East. There is just as much money in sight as ever and the amount is adequate for present purposes. The project is going ahead."

Dr. Wilson Canfield, recently of Detroit, Mich., has purchased a five-acre ranch from F. C. Bowen on Falling Leaf, near Fifth avenue, paying $4500. Dr. Canfield will soon erect a handsome bungalow.

The Monrovia branch of the Monrovia-Duarte Fruit Exchange has been closed for the season. There have been shipped from this station 200 carloads of oranges and high prices have prevailed. The orange orchards are now looking well. The trees blossomed unusually heavy and in order to save the small fruit irrigation has already been begun.

THE TAILOR'S EXCUSES.

A Confession

WE tailors are great people.
We're never Stuck for an excuse.
If the Collar Sags away from the Neck—
There's not enough Goods in the back of the Coat, therefore the Collar is "pulled" away
We'll alter That—
But we don't do a thing except to Stretch the Fabric with the Hot Flat Iron until it almost Shrieks.
Then, Mr. Collar fits Close to the Neck until the "Stretch" in the back of the Coat "fades" away.

We say, "Tailoring's a Game of Chance."
"Perhaps the Very Best Tailor may make one perfect fitting Suit in twenty," so we're not to Blame for this Misfit—but we'll soon put it to rights.
Then we make a few alterations—
—By means of Old Dr. Goose, not by remaking the Suit as we Should.
And when the Suit comes back at the end of a Fortnight or a Month as it surely will Terribly Twisted
We look Wise—
And insinuate that Mr. Wearer doesn't quite understand how to care for a Suit——And promptly pass it over to Old Dr. Goose to Sweat and Press and Shrink and Stretch the Old Thing into Shape again.

Of Course all Suits are not treated in that way—
A Few Suits are "Excuse Free."
"Sincerity" Suits for instance—
"Sincerity" Suits haven't any Bulging Lapels—Drooping Shoulders—Twisted arms—
"Sincerity" Suits will fit to perfection and hold their Shape Permanently—
—For "Sincerity" Suits are Cut and Tailored by Experts—Specialists in their various lines—
Old Dr. Goose isn't required to "Dope" a Shape into a "Sincerity" Suit—not much——For the shape is Sewn into the Fabric by Expert Needleworkers instead—an experienced but Sure Way of making Clothes to fit and hold their shape.
Yet a "Sincerity" Suit—with its permanent Style and Shape—doesn't cost you a penny more than the "Excuse Kind"—the shape of which fades away in a week.

SHE WEDS DYING MAN.

Ante-mortem Celebration of Nuptials in San Bernardino City.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN BERNARDINO, May 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A deathbed marriage took place this evening at La Grande rooming house, the proprietor, Mrs. Rose Mason, being wedded to Lee Ortega. Mrs. Mason is a divorced woman. She and Ortega have been intimate friends since her husband left her.

Ortega belongs to an aristocratic Spanish family. Some time ago he returned to San Bernardino, in a dying condition, having developed quick consumption. Mrs. Mason took him in and now that his life is numbered by hours, showed her devotion by assuming his name. The marriage was to have been yesterday but Ortega was too low.

During the afternoon he rallied and shortly after dark the deputy county clerk was summoned to the bedside to take the dying man's certification to an application for a license, which was issued at once. A clergyman who was conducting a street meeting a half block away was called and tied the knot.

SCHOOL CHILDREN FIGURES.

School Census Marshal C. D. Myers has completed his duties and has submitted a detailed report which shows 2056 children of bona fide school age. Figured on the basis of five residents to each school child, this would mean a population of 10,280. Of this total perhaps 200 people in the Crafton district are outside the city limits. This leaves a population for the city of over 10,000. Mr. Myers states that at the time the census was taken the summer exodus had already begun, so the figures are not "swollen" winter figures.

REDLANDS NEWS NOTES.

Disciples of Isaac Walton are finding much sport in the mountain streams of this section. The fish are plentiful and are unusually gamy this season. W. C. Cash returned from Mill Creek yesterday, bringing with him a speckled beauty fifteen and one-half inches in length.

The local Y.M.C.A. is planning some summer camps for its members. A summer camp of two weeks will be held at Laguna Beach late in July. The association has an ideal mountain camp grounds near here which will probably be taken advantage of later.

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Women's Branch Alliance of Unity Church was held yesterday and the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Daniel Shepard; vice-president, Mrs. J. E. Fairchild; secretary, Mrs. A. J. Hendrickson; corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. S. Denal.

Roots of willow trees have recently obstructed the pipes carrying water to the residents of West Redlands, Barton tract and Mound City and it was finally found necessary to turn the water off and clean the pipes out. The roots were found to occupy three-fourths of the opening in the thirty-inch pipe, and in some instances it was found necessary to remove the pipe to clear it.

The Y.M.C.A. gymnasium classes are today viewing the gas and electrical plants of the Home Gas Company. Next Saturday they will be given a glimpse into the Redlands pottery and on the following Saturday the power-house of the San Bernardino Valley Traction Company will be visited.

ONTARIO.

ONTARIO, May 11—J. M. Horton, city school census marshal, reports 672 children in attendance at the public schools of Ontario. Of these 331 are boys and 341 girls, being an increase in attendance of fifty over last year.

The Home Telephone Company reports an expenditure of $12,000 in labor and materials since the establishment of its plant in this city about a year and a half ago.

The W.C.T.U. members here are soon to begin canvassing for subscriptions for a drinking fountain, which they will erect in a prominent part of the town.

The children of Ontario may again skate on the sidewalks about the town. On account of several protests made by some of the residents of the town, the City Trustees passed a resolution a few weeks ago prohibiting any skating on the sidewalks. But a delegation of boys waited on the meeting of the city fathers this week and asked that the privilege be restored to them, promising to keep off peoples gardens from thenceforth. After giving them a short talk and congratulating them on the way they had respected the board's former resolution, President Smith granted the boys their request.

UPLAND.

UPLAND, May 11.—Acting upon two complaints, sworn to by A. P. Harwood, City Marshal Sawyer today arrested Mrs. Delia Bergon, proprietor of the Bellevue Hotel here, it being charged that she has been selling beer at that hostelry. Mrs. Bergon appeared before City Recorder Crane and pleaded not guilty. She will be tried before a jury May 18. Mrs. Bergon, it is alleged, says she has a permit to sell "temperance beer," and says that was what the stuff is that was secured to be used as evidence.

On the other hand it is averred by the opposing side that the beer, upon analysis, showed a test of over 5 per cent. alcohol.

OXNARD.

OXNARD, May 11.—The right of way from Point Magu, in Ventura county, near the county line, to Hueneme, forming a strip sixty feet wide along the coast for a distance of five miles, has been deeded by ex-Senator Bard and Col. Perkins and others of Hueneme, to the Malibu and Port Los Angeles Railroad. This completes the right of way from Port Los Angeles to Ventura with the exception of through the Broome property, on which condemnation proceedings are now in progress.

WOULD OPEN ROAD TO PALA.

WAY TO THE MISSION THROUGH RIVERSIDE COUNTY.

Hotel Man from County Seat and Two Supervisors Make Trip Over Proposed Routes by Automobile. Projected Way Runs by Perris and from There by Elsinore or Winchester.

RIVERSIDE, May 11.—The newest good roads project in Riverside county is the proposition to improve the road between Riverside and the old mission town of Pala, across the line in San Diego county. When President Ripley of the Santa Fé was in Riverside recently, he and Frank A. Miller made a preliminary inspection of routes, by automobile.

Mr. Miller, Supervisor Shaver and Supervisor Kimbell made the trip by auto to the San Diego county line yesterday, to ascertain the best lines to follow.

One route under consideration is by way of Perris, Elsinore and Temecula, and the other leads through Perris, Winchester, Hemet and Temecula. The Pala Mission is comparatively little known, as it is remote from the railroad, but it is a picturesque old structure and would be of popular interest to tourists if it were made easy of access. The road leading to it from Riverside would pass through some of the richest grain and deciduous fruit land in the county, and much interest in the building of it has already developed.

HIGH PRICE FOR ORANGES.

L. V. W. Brown, a Riverside orange grower who makes a specialty of individuality in the manner in which he packs his fruit, received this week what is said to be the highest price for 96-size oranges ever realized in the New York market. For the special packages containing thirty-six oranges in the style that has become known as the "Brown package," or the "Study in Brown," he received $2.20, which is equivalent to $5.60 for a full-size box of 96's. The fruit was sold by the Westfall Fruit Company.

VICTORIA BEATS REDLANDS.

By a score of 21 to 6 the golf players of the Victoria Club gained their third victory over the Redlands Country Club this afternoon in the series of matches for the Jackson-Williams cup. The trophy now becomes the permanent possession of the Riverside club. The match was played on the links of the Victoria Club and concluded one of the most keenly contested series of matches ever played by the local golf team. Redlands was represented by Quinn, Schaffer, Denman, Higgins, Paine, Marshall, Will, Miller, Severance, Riddel. The Victoria players were Osburn, Whipple, Chase, Howe, Girdlestone, Hebert, Heath, Millice, Pelton and Hewitt.

"Hotel del Coronado" leads them all.

SULPHUR AND ROMANCE.

Wells Near Perris, in Spot Sacred to Traditions, May Become Center of Health Resort.

PERRIS, May 11.—About six miles from town on the famous Bernasconi hot sulphur wells, which, though unpretentious in appearance, are visited by many from miles around, who seek relief from rheumatism and other ailments. For years a shallow well has gushed forth hot sulphur and mineral waters, at the temperature of 108 degrees and poured its waters into a big swamp that drains into the San Jacinto River.

Some time ago Mrs. M. Bernasconi, who owns a ranch of 284 acres, put down a second well a few rods from the first one. At a depth of eighty-nine feet a flow of several inches of water was struck. Recently a little sand pumping increased the flow to about fifteen inches. The water has a temperature of over 100 degrees and is strongly impregnated with sulphur and other minerals. Negotiations for the opening of a health resort are under way. Back of the wells are high hills with a beautiful olive grove and a ranch house at their foot, while looking across the valley to the east, one sees the snowcapped peaks of Old Grayback and Mt. San Jacinto.

Around this place cluster many stories of romances of the early days. Near the wells are three small adobe buildings, the center one of which is more than 125 years old. Here it was that Indians and whites from the San Luis Rey Mission came twice each year to brand their cattle. This small building was constructed by them for their camp headquarters and for their religious services.

Some years ago an Indian, nearly 100 years old, died. He had spent most of his life in the vicinity of this mission camp. He believed that much gold had been buried somewhere near the camp.

HEMET.

HEMET, May 11.—The ladies of the Episcopal Guild were hostesses at a party given at the Hemet Operahouse Friday evening. Miss Gertrude Rives wah chosen May queen, and a Maypole dance of twenty-five couples was danced at 11 o'clock. There were a number of out-of-town guests, among them Mrs. Dr. Martin of San Bernardino, Mrs. Gaylord of Riverside, Mr. and Mrs. Coombe of Banning, Mr. Magee and Mrs. Jewett of Sage, all of whom were entertained by Mrs. Betterell. Mrs. R. G. Wedemeyer had as her guest Mrs. Jordan of Philadelphia.

"Hotel del Coronado"—best ever.

RANCHERS WILL FIGHT.

Orange County Men Will Oppose the Taking of Water by the Irvine Company.

SANTA ANA, May 11.—Another big water fights fight between the Irvine company and the ranchers of El Modena and Villa Park has been clearly drawn in an agreement signed by forty-eight ranchers. These ranchers have employed attorneys and will fight every effort made by the big ranch company to take water from the Santiago watershed.

Recently an agreement between the Irvine company and a large number of ranchers was signed whereby the ranch company was allowed to take water out of the Santiago Cañon and in return the El Modena and Villa Park water companies, known as the Serrano Water Company and the John T. Carpenter Water Company, were to get certain rights for water development in the cañon. The Irvine company then brought suit and those who had signed the agreement were to put in the agreement as answer, thus getting a judgment on it.

But here are forty-eight ranchers who will not sign the Irvine agreement, but who are now banded together to fight that agreement to the last ditch. The opposition has elected Thomas Nicholson, chairman; Williard Smith, secretary; Thomas Nicholson, Orange I. Clark and B. C. Barker, Litigation Committee, and G. C. Morrow, John R. Rush and C. A. Merrit, Financial Committee; H. C. Head of Santa Ana and Kendricks, Knott & Ardis have been retained to represent them.

Over ten years ago the Irvine company built a ditch and took water from the creek onto its immense ranch. Suit was brought and the case was taken to the Supreme Court with the result that it was established that the Irvine company had no right to take any water from the watershed. Irvine's rights in the watershed as against those of the two water companies have never been decided, and the Irvine agreement was furthered as the best arrangement that could be made with the Irvine company. The forty-eight have agreed that they will not consent to allow Irvine to take a drop from the watershed, let him make what concessions he may.

SEWAGE MAKES TROUBLE.

Santa Ana may have to buy 133 acres on which to farm its sewage. The present arrangements are admitted to be unsatisfactory in that the outfall sewer is so low that the sewage cannot be taken on to the property purchased for that purpose. The outfall sewer has broken and is running over lands not belonging to the city. An offer has been made the city of 133 acres adjoining the place where the break now is, and the matter was taken under consideration at a meeting of the City Council last night.

This is in no sense a charity offer, but is given to prove to the afflicted with Catarrh and Chronic diseases that Drs. Shores' treatment is SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHERS. Apply before May 19th. It is a pure test of Drs. Shores' skill as expert Physicians and Specialists. Come today. Come Monday. Come any day this week and take advantage of this great offer of FREE MEDICINES AND FREE TREATMENT FOR ONE WEEK.

Drs. Shores, Specialists

Drs. Shores & Shores have spent their lives in the study of Chronic, Nervous and Special Diseases of Men, Women and Children. They have treated over 100,000 cases in the past 15 years, an experience rarely ever granted any specialists, and have gleaned therefrom information that is invaluable to sick people. They would not attempt to treat Scarlet Fever or Diphtheria at any price, not because they don't know how, but because they have not given it the thought and constant study that other doctors have, and, in short, it is not in their line of specialties. Every moment is given to studying CHRONIC DISEASES. That is where they excel and that is where they can serve you better than any one else.

They know what causes Catarrh. They know how to cure it. They know what causes Stomach Trouble. They know how to CURE it, instead of merely relieving it. They have studied the Liver, the Kidneys, the Ears, the Throat, the Lungs, and Private Diseases, and they know what to do for these troubles. That is all they claim. That is all they treat. Consultation is always free at Drs. Shores' parlors or by letter.

Don't Buy a Cat in a Bag.

Be Sure. Make no Mistake. Don't Pay Out Money on Experiments. Don't buy a Cat in a bag. Drs. Shores have confidence in their skill and ability. They invite you to come and test their skill for one whole week free. All medicines free. You will be under no obligation to continue treatment or pay a cent. Beware of fake Medical Companies and Quack Doctors. Come to Drs. Shores before May 19th and Drs. Shores will give you one week's treatment and medicine free.

The Doctor and Specialists

Drs. Shores have been asked time and again why it is that their treatment cures so many people whom other first-class physicians are unable to cure. They have also been asked if they would advise people to give up their family doctors and employ specialists exclusively.

To the first question Drs. Shores would say that the reason that their treatment cures is not because Drs. Shores are the only good physicians in California, for there are hundreds of eminent doctors here. It is not because they possess superhuman powers, for Drs. Shores never attempt any such shallow deceit as that.

It is Because

They have specially studied the diseases they treat and nothing else. They pay special attention to diagnosis, have every facility and a world of experience to enable them to properly diagnose a case and after diagnosis is complete they begin to remove the cause of the disease and make the organs do their proper work, instead of simply giving drugs to do the work of nature in an artificial way.

The Mistake of Doctors

Many doctors, for instance, use pepsin, bismuth, etc., in stomach trouble to artificially digest the food, and expect the patient to take medicine forever. But Drs. Shores cure the diseased stomach and make it do its own work. That is why they cure stomach troubles.

The old way is like giving a lame man a crutch instead of curing his lameness. It is a temporary "help," but sick people want Cures, and Drs. Shores try to give them cures that stay cured.

THE NEW TREATMENT
"It Soothes" "It Heals"
"It Cures"

These are the expressions heard many times a day in Drs. Shores' parlors from people who have tested other treatments without benefit and find in Drs. Shores' new treatment instant relief from Catarrh, Deafness, Asthma and Lung Diseases. The patient drinks into the air passages these healing balms and soothing oils, reaching every part of the mucous membranes of the nose, throat, eustachian tubes and lungs, like healing salve on a sore. No cutting, no cauterizing, no probing with dirty instruments, but by Drs. Shores' DIRECT CONTACT METHOD, with Drs. Shores' modern instruments, the medicated oils reach the sore spots and heal, are carried into the eustachian tubes, and the LOST HEARING IS RESTORED TO THE DEAF. The sufferers from Lung Diseases breathe into their lungs these SOOTHING OILS, and the soreness disappears, and in many so-called helpless cases A CURE RESULTS. The spasms of Asthma are RELIEVED IN ONE TREATMENT. All made possible with Drs. Shores' new and wonderful treatment for this class of ailments.

One Week's Treatment and Medicines Free to All Who Apply in Person Before May 19, as a Test of Drs. Shores' Skill.

DR. G. W. SHORES.

Shores have decided to give ONE WEEK'S TREATMENT AND MEDICINES ABSOLUTELY FREE OF CHARGE. All are invited. No matter what your disease is or how complicated, Drs. BORN HERE LONG AGO.

Death of an Anaheim Woman Removes Very Old Inhabitant of Southland.

ANAHEIM, May 11.—Mrs. Vicenta Carrillo, mother of Mrs. Adolph Rimpau, who died here Wednesday, was born in Los Angeles ninety-four years ago, and at that time there were only six or eight houses in the city. She was brought up there and her people were wealthy. She was first married to Thomas Yorba at the age of 15 in Los Angeles. He was a well-known member of the Yorba family.

At the age of 25 she married Ramon Carrillo, Yorba having died. Carrillo was also a well-known native. Both marriages took place in the First Catholic Church of Los Angeles. There were eight Carrillo children and all are alive today. There are seventy grandchildren and great grandchildren. At one time Mrs. Carrillo owned the Warner ranch, consisting of several hundred thousand acres, when Fremont and his army were fed on the ranch for two weeks by Mrs. Carrillo and she would not take one cent of pay for it.

The husband of Ramona was employed by Mrs. Carrillo for some time. She left a lot of valuable property which was distributed to the heirs. She was well known.

ANAHEIM.

ANAHEIM, May 11.—Farmers in a number of sections in Northern Orange county report an invasion of worms which not only are working on cabbages, but on oranges as well. It is thought that a few sunshiny days will destroy the pests.

Louie Kroeger celebrated his thirty-fourth birthday yesterday by giving a big chicken barbecue at his home in honor of a number of his friends.

J. J. Blakemore of Fullerton fell from an electric car in Los Angeles last night and sustained severe injuries. A telegram from that city this afternoon states that he is better and will probably recover in a few days.

OFFICIAL SALES: 37,500 Searchlight Western at 5@6; 3000 California Hills at 3⅜@3¾. Unlisted stocks: 6000 Bonnie Claire at 44@45; 5000 do. at 45@49 B. 90; 2000 Mayflower Consolidated at 47 B. 90.

INTEREST GENERAL IN SECURITIES.

INTEREST was general in the various securities listed on the Stock Exchange. Trading was much better than many of the brokers looked for, immediately after the Fiesta celebration. It was claimed that the local stock market looks particularly healthy, pointing to an active summer.

Associated Oil was the leader in trading. One hundred and fifteen shares of stock—new issue—changed hands at prices ranging from 37 to 36.50, the stock opening fairly strong, but closing weaker at 36.50@37. Mexican Petroleum was also a trader among the oil stocks. Two thousand shares were handled at 1.32 cash, while another board lot was sold at 1.32, buyer ten days. Considerable stock is said to have tied up under the latter conditions. Other oil stocks were not handled. Union closed stronger at 205@207, showing a rise of 3½ and 1½ points, respectively, on the bid and asked prices of last Thursday. Little change is noticeable among the remainder.

Home Telephone common shows on the sales sheet for yesterday with transactions totaling twenty shares at 25@24. This is the first trading on the local Stock Exchange floor in this security for several weeks. The stock closed at 23@26, the asked price being down one point as compared with last Thursday. Ten shares of Edison Electric common also changed hands. The price was 69.50. This also is an unusual sale, as none of this stock has been sold for several weeks. The close was at 69@71. Bank stocks and the bonds were quiet.

IN MINING STOCKS.

Trading in the mining stocks was of considerable volume, fully 53,000 shares of mining stock being handled during the half-hour session. The leader was Searchlight Western, there being 37,500 shares of this stock bought up at 5@6. Evidently this is a movement by insiders to gather in all the stock now on the market, both of the exchange and in the street. The close was at 6@6½, showing a distinct rise as compared with Thursday's quotations of 5⅛@5½. California Hills was the only other listed stock to be handled, 3000 shares being traded in at 3⅝@3¾.

Among the unlisted securities, Bonnie Claire was the leader. Six thousand shares of this stock sold at 44@45 cash, while 5000 more were handled at 45@49, buyer ninety days. Mayflower Consolidated was the only other trader, 2000 shares selling at 47, buyer ninety days.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

Interest was lagging in all commodities yesterday. The attendance at the Produce Exchange was light, and only three sales were made. There was little bidding and few features of the market were brought out. Local ranch eggs showed a decline of ½ cent, and case-count eggs were lowered ¼ cent. There was no over-supply yesterday. In fact, there was just enough coming in to keep the trade moving. The demand for eggs and butter was not quite up to expectation during Fiesta week, and complaints were heard in many quarters that other staples did not sell as well as anticipated.

Butter was firm. No changes were made in prices. Cheese arrivals were all Anchor.

The onion market had a better tone yesterday. A large shipment of beans came in by steamer from the North.

Strawberries came in freely, and displayed a weak undertone. Vegetables were sufficient to all requirements. Prices changes were few.

Fish was plentiful.

Prices dealers pay for live poultry have declined.

Sales on 'change. Eight cases of local ranch eggs; 40 cases of cheeses.

The receipts of produce as reported for Thursday's and Friday's exchange were as follows: Eggs, 831 cases; butter, 30,511 lbs.; cheese, 5547 lbs.; potatoes, 2810 sacks; onions, 432 sacks; beans, 1029 sacks; sweet potatoes, none.

NEW YORK MARKETS.

SHARES AND MONEY.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, May 11.—The stock market today showed the effect of the mixed influences at work and also reflected the diversion of speculative activity to the grain and cotton markets in the scantiness of the dealings. The soaring of the market price of wheat was a depressing factor in stocks and checked for a time an upward tendency which had developed in sympathy with the strength of Union Pacific. Opinions on the wheat crop are influenced not only by the damage shown in the government's report of May 1, conditions published yesterday, but by the fears of further damage since that time, in view of the unfavorable weather conditions which prevailed. The continued delay from the same cause in the seeding of the spring wheat crop adds to the anxiety caused by the condition of the winter wheat crop. The bank statement showed a greater loss of cash than indicated by the preliminary estimates, but the considerable loan reduction was well received, in view of the known demand for speculative requirements during the week. It is inferred that the higher inetrest rates have attracted renewed offerings of funds in this market by interior banks, with the result that demands on local banking resources are relieved. The money market has been stronger since Thursday owing to the announcement of the Union Pacific official plan of financing, and the supposition that other offerings by railroad companies are imminent. Rumors persisted of an intended bond issue by the Reading and the pressure on that stock depressed the market. American Smelting was under some pressure. The strength of Union Pacific was attributed to a more favorable view of the financial plan than the standpoint of advantage to the company as distinguished from the immediate value of subscription rights to stockholders. The net changes in prices are small but gains predominate and the closing was strong.

FLASH OF MONSTER ELECTRIC SPARK WILL START BIG FLOOD OF ENERGY.

WITH a swish of water through its immense power mains, the great new Kern River electrical development system of the Edison Company will go into operation tomorrow. Into Los Angeles will be poured immediately afterward, over the longest power transmission line in the world, an enormous supply of electrical energy. Four years of hard work, in which the brain of the engineer and the brawn of the laborer have commingled, will have been completed. Los Angeles and Southern California will have at their command a tremendously increased amount of power to turn the wheels of industry. The Edison Company thus doubles the power development capacity of all its other plants combined.

The completion of this great system is a wonder of electrical engineering. It is a notable triumph for the company that inaugurated it and for the individual men whose efforts have carried it through to a successful conclusion. The eyes of the electrical world are upon the project.

Over the 117 rough miles of the transmission line, from far up in Kern River Cañon, there will pour daily into Los Angeles 25,000 kilowatts of electricity under a pressure of 75,000 volts.

Over two ranges, from the high mountains almost to the level of the sea, the current will flow through a transmission line that bristles with unique features.

The great band of copper that links the power-house with Los Angeles is one of the many wonderful things of the big system. Two and a half million pounds of copper cable are used in the line. There are 1140 steel towers, built to bear the heavy load and to withstand every conceivable action of the elements. The most remarkable insulators ever made are on the cross arms of these towers, being nearly three feet in height, and each weighing fifty pounds.

In the construction of the tunnels and in the placing of the ponderous machinery in the mountains, obstacles seemingly insurmountable have been overcome. Eighteen miles of road through the roughest of mountain country was built in order that some of the machinery might be placed.

Kern River Plant No. 1, at Edison, in the Kern country, is the first and largest plant of the Edison Electric Company's great system that will reach almost to the head waters of the Kern River. The water tomorrow will pour through the miles of tunnel under the granite hills; the big dynamo room will whir and hum as the huge wheels turn, and over the long transmission cable will flash into Los Angeles the enormous store of electrical energy.

The achievement is of tremendous import to Los Angeles and all its tributary territory, both directly and indirectly. Each power plant spells cheaper power rates, and cheap power is the prime secret of commercial success.

The development of the water resources of the State is fast exorcising the Bogie man of the southern coast, the fuel problem, and today manufacturing is possible on a scale undreamed of a few years ago. Manufactories in Los Angeles and vicinity are now being supplied with power at cheaper rates than exist in any other section of the United States, barring possibly a small area in the natural gas belt in the Middle West.

Through pumping power supplied by the Edison company, an immense territory tributary to Los Angeles is reclaimed from desert barrenness, thousands of acres of sterile lands are made fruitful. Hundreds of homes, magnificent orange groves, beautiful vineyards, have taken the place of arid, dust-colored stretches. Fourteen thousand acres have thus been reclaimed, and this is only a small portion of the area that will be made to blossom through the medium of this new plant.

LIMITLESS POWER SUPPLY.

This power is inexhaustible, illimitable. Imagine this great new plant as a vast, inexhaustible coal bed discovered in the foothills at the city's very doors, and one begins to realize what it means to every business man and manufacturer, to every rancher and homeseeker. It is the ushering in of a new industrial era on the Coast.

In consideration of the great importance of the new Kern River plant it might be expected that there would be much bustle and excitement in the final preparations for the initial try-out in the big power-house. But there no ceremony is contemplated; no one will be present but a few officials of the Edison company and the employés at the power-house.

The last details of preparation were attended to under the personal direction of H. H. Sinclair, vice-president of the Edison company, who has been in the cañon for the past few days in anticipation of the starting up of the plant.

The bearings of the big generators, the impulse wheels, the exciters and

NOBLES TREK OVER DESERT.

Sorrow Solaced in Singing as They Go.

From all the railway stations in Los Angeles arose a wail of sorrow from departing Nobles of the Mystic Shrine yesterday. The first special train laden with sad-eyed guests rolled out of Arcade station at 2 o'clock in the morning. All day long other trains carried the pilgrims upon the return journey by the northern caravan route to their eastern home oasis.

Their regrets at going were many.

Their only consolation was that the zem-zem water is running low in the oasis of Los Angeles.

"Oh, Los Angeles, Fairy City of the Angels. Long may your palms wave their feathery fingers in the perfume laden breezes of the Southland; for, ever will they beckon me to come again, and some day I will obey."

Thus apostrophized the poet of Syria Temple as the tears ran down his prosperous cheeks and he waved adieu to the sorrowing ladies on the platform who were present to bid him—and other jolly Nobles—a fond farewell.

"GOOD-BY LADIES."

Like wildfire spread the departing pilgrim's song, until whole trainloads took up the refrain:

"Good-by ladies, good-by ladies, good-by ladies, we're going to leave you now.
Sorrowing we roll along, roll along, roll along; sorrowing we roll along o'er the desert sands."

It was all very sad.

More than one valedictory was delivered yesterday by graduates of a Fiesta week in Los Angeles and all expressed genuine sorrow at having to leave the gladsome precincts of this oasis.

Even the camels objected.

However, there are some happy Shriners left. They are the ones who have made up their minds to stay in the oasis.

"Los Angeles is good enough for me," stated one Nevada Shriner as he bade a party of his desert friends farewell. "No more hot sands in Death Valley for me. This oasis suits me just right."

But the others got back at him as they sang of the joys of the desert:

And the world we'll tell to go to, but we'll stay on the ranch."

There's no telling, maybe some of the desert Shriners will get homesick after all and desert the oasis later for the hot sands at 130 in the shade of a gold nugget.

CARAVAN ROUTES.

As it happens all the outgoing special trains are over the Southern Pacific, for while most of them arrived over the Santa Fé and Salt Lake, the pilgrims continue over this road, mostly by the Coast line to the North, some going East from San Francisco, but others extending their journey to Portland and Seattle and thence East.

Other Nobles are postponing the sad date of departure as long as possible. They have a chance to do this for their special Shriner tickets are good until July 31; if they allow from two to five days to get home, this will give them a chance to get well acquainted with all the zem-zem fountains in this oasis.

But while the special Shriner trains rolled out over the Southern Pacific there were many parties returning by way of the Santa Fé and Salt Lake. Most of these are being called home by the stress of business, but all had friends and Nobles of Al Malaikah to bid them "God speed," and tell them to be sure and come back.

There will always be a welcome for them in the oasis of Los Angeles.

BADGER AND BULLDOG.

El Zaribahs have a new yell:

And thus it is that the caravan is getting started. But it is a wrench. The camels have grown fat and lazy, the pilgrims are just getting their second thirst and the palm trees look good to both.

LIKE A DREAM.

The reaction will come, back in the East, when the Noble pilgrim awakes to the daily routine of life outside the mystic land of sunshine and flowers. Like a dream will seem to him the snowy mountain peaks and orange groves, the Magic Isles of Catalina, the lullabies of the Pacific and most of all the brightness of Los Angeles in her holiday garb, sparkling with a myriad of lights, resplendant in all the Fiesta colors and many-hued blossoms from a thousand gardens.

But the hot sands of the desert are still to traverse. It is a good thing the camels have laid in an eight-day stock of zem-zem water.

All in all, during this last day the Nobles have been prone to burst into song. The zem-zem water has been strong and they have been filled with inspiration.

FOR ISIS GIRLS.

Another refrain of a popular song somewhat changed to suit the occasion, was:

"Good-by, little girl, good-by!
Good-by, little girl, don't cry!
For we'll surely come again,
If we only live till then!
Don't sigh, little girl, don't sigh."

NOTHING LIKE IT.

From every temple, from all the visitors representing all sections of the country, there is only one opinion expressed:

"Nothing like it in the way of entertainment has ever been, and every

Mrs. John A. Logan, always a welcome visitor to Los Angeles, was very enthusiastic in expressing her admiration of the Fiesta. She arrived just in time to view the parade from Madame Coe's millinery windows in the Parmelee-Dohrman Building. Although somewhat fatigued she fully appreciated the beautiful display, especially admiring the many fine horses. Her charming manner and interesting conversation were much enjoyed by the ladies who had assembled at Madame Coe's.

The Williamson piano stock has been bought by the J. B. Brown Music Co. to be closed at once at the latter's salesrooms, 648 So. Broadway. They carried many fine grades of instruments, all of which will be on sale tomorrow at the Brown Music Co., 648 Broadway, at $100 or more under their worth. Act quickly. Such values don't last long.

Not only that ladies run any risk whatever by ordering at Mrs. Kruseman, milliner, 1302 Pico, corner Rich, as she takes all responsibility, but as she has no display to make. FLASH OF MONSTER ELECTRIC SPARK WILL START BIG FLOOD OF ENERGY.

WITH a swish of water through its immense power mains, the great new Kern River electrical development system of the Edison Company will go into operation tomorrow. Into Los Angeles will be poured immediately afterward, over the longest power transmission line in the world, an enormous supply of electrical energy. Four years of hard work, in which the brain of the engineer and the brawn of the laborer have commingled, will have been completed. Los Angeles and Southern California will have at their command a tremendously increased amount of power to turn the wheels of industry. The Edison Company thus doubles the power development capacity of all its other plants combined.

The completion of this great system is a wonder of electrical engineering. It is a notable triumph for the company that inaugurated it and for the individual men whose efforts have carried it through to a successful conclusion. The eyes of the electrical world are upon the project.

Over the 117 rough miles of the transmission line, from far up in Kern River Cañon, there will pour daily into Los Angeles 25,000 kilowatts of electricity under a pressure of 75,000 volts.

Over two ranges, from the high mountains almost to the level of the sea, the current will flow through a transmission line that bristles with unique features.

The great band of copper that links the power-house with Los Angeles is one of the many wonderful things of the big system. Two and a half million pounds of copper cable are used in the line. There are 1140 steel towers, built to bear the heavy load and to withstand every conceivable action of the elements. The most remarkable insulators ever made are on the cross arms of these towers, being nearly three feet in height, and each weighing fifty pounds.

In the construction of the tunnels and in the placing of the ponderous machinery in the mountains, obstacles seemingly insurmountable have been overcome. Eighteen miles of road through the roughest of mountain country was built in order that some of the machinery might be placed.

Kern River Plant No. 1, at Edison, in the Kern country, is the first and largest plant of the Edison Electric Company's great system that will reach almost to the head waters of the Kern River. The water tomorrow will pour through the miles of tunnel under the granite hills; the big dynamo room will whir and hum as the huge wheels turn, and over the long transmission cable will flash into Los Angeles the enormous store of electrical energy.

The achievement is of tremendous import to Los Angeles and all its tributary territory, both directly and indirectly. Each power plant spells cheaper power rates, and cheap power is the prime secret of commercial success.

The development of the water resources of the State is fast exorcising the Bogie man of the southern coast, the fuel problem, and today manufacturing is possible on a scale undreamed of a few years ago. Manufactories in Los Angeles and vicinity are now being supplied with power at cheaper rates than exist in any other section of the United States, barring possibly a small area in the natural gas belt in the Middle West.

Through pumping power supplied by the Edison company, an immense territory tributary to Los Angeles is reclaimed from desert barrenness, thousands of acres of sterile lands are made fruitful. Hundreds of homes, magnificent orange groves, beautiful vineyards, have taken the place of arid, dust-colored stretches. Fourteen thousand acres have thus been reclaimed, and this is only a small portion of the area that will be made to blossom through the medium of this new plant.

LIMITLESS POWER SUPPLY.

This power is inexhaustible, illimitable. Imagine this great new plant as a vast, inexhaustible coal bed discovered in the foothills at the city's very doors, and one begins to realize what it means to every business man and manufacturer, to every rancher and homeseeker. It is the ushering in of a new industrial era on the Coast.

In consideration of the great importance of the new Kern River plant it might be expected that there would be much bustle and excitement in the final preparations for the initial tryout in the big power-house. But there no ceremony is contemplated; no one will be present but a few officials of the Edison company and the employés at the power-house.

The last details of preparation were attended to under the personal direction of H. H. Sinclair, vice-president of the Edison company, who has been in the cañon for the past few days in anticipation of the starting up of the plant.

The bearings of the big generators, the impulse wheels, the exciters and

NOBLES TREK OVER DESERT.

Sorrow Solaced in Singing as They Go.

From all the railway stations in Los Angeles arose a wail of sorrow from departing Nobles of the Mystic Shrine yesterday. The first special train laden with sad-eyed guests rolled out of Arcade station at 2 o'clock in the morning. All day long other trains carried the pilgrims upon the return journey by the northern caravan route to their eastern home oasis.

Their regrets at going were many.

Their only consolation was that the zem-zem water is running low in the oasis of Los Angeles.

"Oh, Los Angeles, Fairy City of the Angels. Long may your palms wave their feathery fingers in the perfume laden breezes of the Southland; for, ever will they beckon me to come again, and some day I will obey."

Thus apostrophized the poet of Syria Temple as the tears ran down his prosperous cheeks and he waved adieu to the sorrowing ladies on the platform who were present to bid him—and other jolly Nobles—a fond farewell.

"GOOD-BY LADIES."

Like wildfire spread the departing pilgrim's song, until whole trainloads took up the refrain:

"Good-by ladies, good-by ladies, good-by ladies, we're going to leave you now.
Sorrowing we roll along, roll along, roll along; sorrowing we roll along o'er the desert sands."

It was all very sad.

More than one valedictory was delivered yesterday by graduates of a Fiesta week in Los Angeles and all expressed genuine sorrow at having to leave the gladsome precincts of this oasis.

Even the camels objected.

However, there are some happy Shriners left. They are the ones who have made up their minds to stay in the oasis.

"Los Angeles is good enough for me," stated one Nevada Shriner as he bade a party of his desert friends farewell. "No more hot sands in Death Valley for me. This oasis suits me just right."

But the others got back at him as they sang of the joys of the desert:

And the world we'll tell to go to, but we'll stay on the ranch."

CARAVAN ROUTES.

As it happens all the outgoing special trains are over the Southern Pacific, for while most of them arrived over the Santa Fé and Salt Lake, the pilgrims continue over this road, mostly by the Coast line to the North, some going East from San Francisco, but others extending their journey to Portland and Seattle and thence East.

Other Nobles are postponing the sad date of departure as long as possible. They have a chance to do this for their special Shriner tickets are good until July 31; if they allow from two to five days to get home, this will give them a chance to get well acquainted with all the zem-zem fountains in this oasis.

But while the special Shriner trains rolled out over the Southern Pacific there were many parties returning by way of the Santa Fé and Salt Lake. Most of these are being called home by the stress of business, but all had friends and Nobles of Al Malaikah to bid them "God speed," and tell them to be sure and come back.

There will always be a welcome for them in the oasis of Los Angeles.

BADGER AND BULLDOG.

El Zaribahs have a new yell:

And thus it is that the caravan is getting started. But it is a wrench. The camels have grown fat and lazy, the pilgrims are just getting their second thirst and the palm trees look good to both.

LIKE A DREAM.

The reaction will come, back in the East, when the Noble pilgrim awakes to the daily routine of life outside the mystic land of sunshine and flowers. Like a dream will seem to him the snowy mountain peaks and orange groves, the Magic Isles of Catalina, the lullabies of the Pacific and most of all the brightness of Los Angeles in her holiday garb, sparkling with a myriad of lights, resplendant in all the Fiesta colors and many-hued blossoms from a thousand gardens.

But the hot sands of the desert are still to traverse. It is a good thing the camels have laid in an eight-day stock of zem-zem water.

All in all, during this last day the Nobles have been prone to burst into song. The zem-zem water has been strong and they have been filled with inspiration.

FOR ISIS GIRLS.

Another refrain of a popular song somewhat changed to suit the occasion, was:

"Good-by, little girl, good-by!
Good-by, little girl, don't cry!
For we'll surely come again,
If we only live till then!
Don't sigh, little girl, don't sigh."

NOTHING LIKE IT.

From every temple, from all the visitors representing all sections of the country, there is only one opinion expressed:

"Nothing like it in the way of entertainment has ever been, and every member of Al Malaikah Temple is a prince of good fellows.".

Over the whole continent will be carried the story of what can be done in Los Angeles for the entertainment of its guests, and the Al Malaikah Shriners will find the latch-string out for them wherever they may go. As the ancient Arabs say in their native tongue in greeting and farewell:

"Es Salamu Aleikum."

"Aleikum es Salaam."

TEMPLES DEPARTING.

Mecca Temple of New York—the "Mother" Temple—was the first temple to leave in a special train yesterday and pulled out from the Arcade Depot at 2 a.m., with 105 in the party. Ismaillai and Rajah Temples were the next to leave over the same route to the north at 2:10 a.m., 130 strong.

Medinah Temple started for Chicago 100 in number at 8 a.m., and the other temples which left for the north over the Southern Pacific yesterday were, Aleppa Temple and the Connecticut and Rhode Island Temples at 8:30 in one train; Melha Temple at 8:30 in another train, and Past Imperial Potentate Alvah P. Clayton and his party in two special cars at 8:30 a.m.

Syria Temple with 122 in the party, left at 11 a.m.; Aladdin at 4 p.m.; Moolah at 6 p.m., and the St. Paul Nobles at 7:30 p.m. All the trains were composed of standard Pullman sleepers with diners and baggage cars attached.

At 3 o'clock this morning 125 Nobles of the Mystic Shrine took a special train upon their return journey to Pennsylvania. At 11 o'clock this morning the Imperial Council special will leave the Arcade Depot. Tomorrow Kismet Temple with 125 members will start from San Pedro at 11:30 a.m., direct through for the north by way of Santa Barbara.

Besides these special trains many special Shriner cars have been attached to nearly every regular train running north out of Los Angeles.

other machinery have been thoroughly trid out; the immense oil switches, by which the high-voltage currents are broken in tanks of oil, doing away with the dangers attendant upon the old methods, and the banks of transformers have been thoroughly tested. Everything is satisfactory and ready for the turning in of the water.

ONE WORD WILL START IT.

A telephone message to the headworks will order the tunnels flooded, and a little later the big gates at the intake will be raised. Swirling and eddying, the waters will foam into the tunnels in their first race through the eight and two-thirds miles of underground conduit.

Concreted and plastered as these tunnels are, they give a smooth, uniform passage for the waters, and down the gentle gradient of eight feet a mile the stream will flow at the velocity of eight feet a second. Quickly the depth will increase until the water fills the tunnels to the six-foot-six-inch mark. Through the brief spaces of the open flumes it will laugh in the sunshine, to be an instant later enveloped in the subterranean gloom.

As the forebays rapidly fill by the flood of waters the gates of the pressure main will open, to pour down the steep, steel-lined incline shaft, accumulating pressure with every inch; then into the horizontal section running along the south side of the power-house, from which lead the feed pipes under the floor of the dynamo room to the main unit and exciter impulse wheels.

THE WORKING SYSTEM.

Here will be shown the working system of the big nozzles and the method of calming the waters. The nozzle is of the deflecting type operating on a swivel, the Y piece of the nozzle, weighing fifteen tons, being raised or lowered by means of a self-containing governor working under 125 pounds oil pressure.

In case of emergency the nozzle is deflected, the stream of water passing under the impulse wheel and striking a steel deflector plate at the other side of the concrete apartment, fifteen feet away, where it describes an arc of 180 degrees and is brought to rest—the waters which a moment before left the nozzle as rigid as a beam of steel, and capable of such enormous power, flowing calmly over the steel baffle plates into the tailrace, deprived of all energy.

Lowered for the first rush of waters, the roar of the stream, as it emerges from the nozzle and strikes the deflector plate with the terrific impact of 380 pounds to the square inch, will be deafening. Slowly the nozzles will raise, the big buckets of the impulse wheels catch the jet, and the whir and hum of the swiftly revolving wheels will signalize the birth of a new and powerful force.

AS THE BIG WHEELS TURN.

Up in the main dynamo room there will be but a soft, murmuring whir as the big wheels, in their perfectly adjusted bearings, spin at the rate of 250 revolutions a minute, generating 10,750 horse power to the unit. The dropping of a switch turns the current into the transformers, where the generator voltage of 2300 is stepped up to the line pressure of 75,000 volts. A moment later, at a signal from Mr. Sinclair, one of the employés will throw on the switch that jumps the juice onto the copper cables of the long transmission line.

These transmission wires stretch their length across rocky heights and ridges, over tumbling mountain streams, into little cup-like valleys and through the gloomy recesses of dark cañons. Out onto broad stretches of desert plain they sweep, and over fertile prairies into busy, bustling Los Angeles. But, instantaneously with the closing of the switch, the giant force, generated far up in Kern River Cañon, will register in the voltmeters of the transformers in the receiving station at Los Angeles, 117 miles away.

A little group of directors and officials will gather in the big power-house to witness the event. Success to them will be a matter of great pride and gratification. And well it may be.

PLANT A RECORD-BREAKER.

In various phases this plant is a record-breaker in the science of water-power development. It is the largest plant west of Niagara. The transmission line is the longest in the world. The pressure of 75,000 volts is the highest ever attempted over such a length of cable. The conduit is the longest underground tunnel system in use. The pressure main is the first of the kind ever attempted. From the power-house to the head works it is all that engineering science could make it. Much of the success of the hydraulic work is due to the company's chief hydraulic engineer, F. C. Finkle.

The dam, thrown across the cañon at the intake, backs the water up for over a mile, forming a large reservoir, from which the waters feed into the tunnels in sufficient quantity to fill them to their required depth of six feet and six inches. This reservoir also acts as a settling basin, the sand and silt being carried away through the drainage tunnel, which opens into the bed of the river about twenty-five feet from, and directly in front of, the intake.

The massive gates at the intake and the drainage tunnel are raised and lowered by hydraulic pressure supplied from a motor-driven pump; or, in case of accident to that, by a hand pump. At a moment's notice, in case of emergency, these gates can be raised or lowered, as the case requires.

HARNESSING THE RIVER.

A glance at the head works and the tunnel system makes clear the entire scheme of this immense undertaking. From this point the river, in the twelve miles to the power-house, drops, by a succession of falls and steep grades, almost a thousand feet, while, on the other hand, the tunnel grade has a gentle fall of only eight feet a mile, cutting off several miles of the river's windings by piercing the mountains in almost a direct line, the total fall to the forebay being only sixty-eight feet.

Thus, instead of the waters following their natural course far down in the gorge, they are run through the gravity conduit high above the bed of the river, emerging from the tunnels into the forebay, 877 feet above the power-house, and shot through the immense pressure main against the impulse wheels.

Carrying their full load, the tunnels have a capacity of 410 second-feet, or 20,500 miners' inches. Accurate water measurements for the past five years show that the minimum flow of the river is more than sufficient to supply the full capacity of the tunnels.

This underground conduit, every foot of it, was drilled and blasted through the solid granite of the lower hills of the Sierras. Left by the miners an uneven, irregular, jagged passage, the concrete lining later put in makes of the tunnels a smooth, uniform conduit that forms a perfectly obstructionless course for the flow of the waters. Overhead, where the natural roof of the rock is not self-sustaining, an arching of concrete eighteen inches thick is built to prevent the filling of the tunnels by falling rock.

NO LOSS OF WATER.

The advantages of this concrete lining are manifold. Besides reducing friction to the minimum, with a consequent conservation of the water's energy, it permits of no seepage, and saves to the company and to the ranchers in the valley below, who are dependent upon this water for the irrigation of their lands, the loss by evaporation that takes place in the flow of the river along its natural bed, which is considerable.

The main interest, perhaps, centers around the big pressure main of the plant. The electrical world is watching this main as intently as will those who watch the waters surge into its yawning elliptical mouth.

This is a radical departure from the force mains in general use. Instead of a weather-exposed tube, this is an underground shaft for its entire length. All danger of the pipe being thrown out of position by the force of the waters, or of being injured by landslides or falling boulders, is entirely avoided.

It is a steel tube, incased for its entire distance in solid concrete, the pipe tapering from a maximum interior diameter of ninety inches to a minimum interior diameter of twenty-eight inches. The thickness of the shell of this pipe is three-sixteenths of an inch where it has a solid rock backing, but where it leaves this formation and has only steel to depend on for withstanding the pressure of the water, the interior diameter is increased to seventy-two inches, and the thickness of the pipe increased to one and three-eighths inches.

As the several branch pipes delivering water to the impulse wheels are taken off, the diameter of pipe is reduced, also the thickness of shell, until at the lower end the diameter is but twenty-eight inches and the thickness five-eighths of an inch. Each of the feed pipes is also twenty-eight inches in diameter and five-eighths of an inch thick. Over one million pounds of steel were used in its construction.

TREMENDOUS TASK.

The building of the pressure main was a work requiring the best efforts of the skilled mechanic. In ten-foot sections, the pipe was hoisted over the aerial tramway to the top of the hill, and from there conveyed to the mouth of the incline shaft, where it was lowered slowly and carefully into place. As each length was riveted, the work taking from ten to twelve hours, the ironworkers left and their places were taken by the concretors. Around the pipe, into every nook and crevice of the irregular, rock-hewn shaft was packed concrete, cementing firmly together mountain and tube.

The perpendicular head of water used in the development of power is 877 feet. This, flowing down the 45 per cent. incline, gives a pressure at the impulse wheels of 380 pounds to the square inch.

POWER-HOUSE STRONG TOWER.

The power-house is a solidly built structure of reinforced concrete, with steel trusses and corrugated iron roof, and is fireproof throughout. It is built on the banks of the river, twenty feet above high-water mark of the spring freshets, and is set on solid bedrock. The main dynamo room is 50x168 feet, giving ample room for the four big generators, the transformers and other machinery.

The power is generated in four units, each unit operated by two overhanging impulse water wheels, carrying eighteen brass buckets. Each impulse wheel is set in a separate masonry compartment. These compartments open directly into the tailrace [illegible] north side of the building, where [illegible] water is measured before it is turned to its natural channel.

For the excitation of the [illegible] two direct-current exciters are provided, either one capable of [illegible] the plant. Each of these is of [illegible] kilowatt capacity, making [illegible] tions a minute.

The generators are of the [illegible] field type, at a periodicity of [illegible] cycles, and a potential of 2300 [illegible] are rated at 5000 kilowatts, and [illegible] ate a three-phase current.

Twelve 1667-kilowatt transformers in four banks of three each, connected in y, step up the generator voltage 2300 to the line pressure of 75,000 [illegible] Each bank of transformers is separately installed in a fireproof masonry compartment.

The oil-circulating system for [illegible] ing the transformers is a new [illegible] The oil is forced through cooling [illegible] situated in the tailrace, consisting [illegible] a series of pipes ten feet long and [illegible] inches in diameter, the whole [illegible] made up of four sections [illegible] 1008 tubes. Water flows over [illegible] stantly, and in this manner the transformers are supplied with a [illegible] stream of cool oil.

This is a great improvement [illegible] the old method of cooling [illegible] the transformers by means of [illegible] coils, and averts the danger [illegible] leaking into the transformers [illegible] oil is especially refined and [illegible] to a disruptive value of [illegible]

The switchboard is one of the [illegible] compact on the Coast. It is [illegible] in the form of a combination [illegible] and panel board, the three-phase [illegible] erators, step-up transformers and [illegible] going transmission lines being [illegible] trolled from the bench-board [illegible] while the exciter generators are [illegible] trolled from panel boards [illegible] one end of the switchboard.

The switches for controlling [illegible] generator fields are mounted on [illegible] in the rear of the switchboard [illegible] are arranged for tripping [illegible] by pull buttons located on the [illegible] board section. An emergency [illegible] ton is provided, connected for [illegible] all field switches simultaneously.

No high-voltage current [illegible] through the switchboard, all [illegible] tension wires being isolated [illegible] arate masonry compartments [illegible] switchboard is thoroughly [illegible] and every precaution taken [illegible] greatest possible safety.

The machinery in use [illegible] the plant is all of the latest [illegible] construction, much of it [illegible] design, while the many [illegible] features expressed in the [illegible] a long step in advance of [illegible] development.

This is the seventh plant [illegible] kind now operated by the [illegible] pany. The waters of the [illegible] Cañon, San Antonio Creek, [illegible] Creek, and Lytle Creek, [illegible] southern part of the State, [illegible] ready been harnessed. [illegible] will be commenced on [illegible] and 3 of the Kern River [illegible] adding chapter by chapter to the [illegible] list of triumphs of the [illegible] which is due in a great [illegible] utation of the Pacific [illegible] standing first in the field of [illegible] power development.

QUEEN AMONG CITIES AND ALTOGETHER LOVELY.

There is no more frontier to American civilization. It was planted at Cape Cod and at Jamestown three centuries ago. It pushed forward, unafraid, into the great howling wilderness around, leaped the barriers of the Appalachian chain, and planted its flag all the way from Niagara Falls to New Orleans. The plains of Ohio and Illinois next saw this banner in the breeze. In time, the Mississippi was leaped, the Missouri was followed to its sources, the Rocky Mountains were climbed, and the standard was planted at San Francisco, Los Angeles and Portland.

And thus stands Los Angeles today the queen city of the farthest West, a queen and altogether lovely among any thousand cities in the world. We try continually to comprehend the greatness of our fair city in all its many elements. But lo, when we think we have it all in our grasp, it expands, and lo, the comprehension is too narrow to take in all the greatness of this queen of the West. The Federal census comes along in the last year of the dying century, counts us, adds the figures, and proclaims our population 102,000. Year by year for seven successive revolving periods the city school census goes out into every household, hotel and boarding house within the city limits and makes an accurate count. But the figures fairly leap and dance before our eyes, showing an increase of 20,000, 25,000, 30,000 and 35,000 souls a year. The report made by the official State school census just closed shows that the city contains 284,411 souls, an increase in a year of 41,760. Now the school census is understood to be an exact count so far as that is possible. Whatever footing the school census shows, no names were counted twice in reaching the result, and in spite of any possible painstaking many names must necessarily have been missed.

For days past the manufacturing interests of the city of Los Angeles have had an open exhibition of their products in a large hall here in the city. This show has been fully treated in various ways in the columns of The Times, and those who have not seen it have obtained from the columns of the paper a pretty clear idea of what is being done in this direction. Two years ago the Bureau of Statistics showed in Los Angeles a total number of 814 manufacturing establishments, paying yearly wages of $7,088,175, and turning out annually products of a value of $34,814,475. These are the figures as they are given out by the persons controlling these various industries. Allowance must be made here, not for exaggeration, but for underestimation. The pay roll of the various industries in the city today would probably show an aggregate sum of something like $9,000,000, and the value of the total output would scarcely fall short of $50,000,000 and might run to a higher figure. As the population grows, of course there is a natural expansion of these various industrial enterprises. If the population of the city increases from 2000 to 3000 souls a month, many of these people find employment in the increase of our industrial activities and the more numerous hands working diligently hour by hour naturally add in due proportion to the value of the output. The two years since the industrial census was made would show an increase in the city population of 60,000 or 70,000 people. That would be an increase of over 40 per cent. in the two years, and with a similar increase in industries, the output would run to over $47,000,000.

Those who glanced at the cartoon in Saturday morning's Times must have been impressed with the number of conventions to be held here this year. We know what one of them amounted to. The records show that 40,000 Shriners and their friends registered at headquarters. We have seen the streets look like a gala day in old Cairo. The Shriners leave us on every train that goes out of the city, and will scarcely be gone when we will be called upon to make preparations for something like as numerous an army of the educational people of America who will gather here in their convention. One of the religious denominations of the country, and an important one, will hold its annual convention here. The National Mothers' Congress, the Eclectic Doctors' Association of the United States, the Good Roads convention, the State lodge of the Odd Fellows, the Press Humorists of America closing up the long line of processions that come from all parts of North America to visit this queen city of the farthest West.

One takes up the Saturday morning paper, wherein the bank clearings of more than half a hundred of the leading cities in the country are given, and we find Los Angeles sixteenth from the top of the list. For the week just closed, the increase in bank clearings for this city over the corresponding week last year was more than 10 1-2 per cent. Only five of the fifteen cities above it in bank clearings show a better record, and we have to go to such cities of immense activity as Chicago and St. Louis to find a competitor which outstrips ourselves. We run away over Omaha, Milwaukee, Buffalo and Denver, and no other city on the Pacific Slope, with the single exception of San Francisco, comes anywhere near to our record.

Take another record, that of building for the month of April in about forty American cities. Here we find Los Angeles stands ninth in the list. During that month, the building permits issued in this city numbered 709 and the cost of this new building fell just short of $1,500,000.

And as they say about fishing, it was not a very good building month in the city of Los Angeles, anyway. Compared with the same month a year ago, it fell off in the number of edifices about 130 and in cost something over $500,000. But April, 1906, was the month of second greatest record in the history of the city. Still, 1907 is doing very well, with the monthly record so far running about equal to that of April, and indicating an annual building of about 8500 new edifices, to cost something like $18,000,000.

Summing up, Los Angeles is growing in population faster than any other city of its class in America. But swift as the progress of our population is, the city's gain in banking wealth, in the activity of the use of money, in various industries and in its building is more rapid even than in population. All this seems to furnish an exceedingly broad and solid basis for the future of the city.

WARM UP.

The world seems to be realizing that it made a mistake when it excluded warmth from the life of the people. By this is not meant bodily warmth—just keeping warm at the fireside when the weather is cold—but the warmth that greets the eye and permeates the senses. The warmth of color and the warmth of music—that's what is meant. At least the so-called Anglo Saxon world tabooed these things about four hundred years ago and kept it up ever since. But now it appears to realize that it was robbing itself and is starting in to warm up again.

The human heart craves warmth, and when given it the best that is in mankind comes out. It was a fearful error to drive out "the burning songs that Sappho sung" from the lives of men as we have been doing. It impoverished our souls. It was no less cruel to exclude from our homes the color of the glowing picture and the bright fabrics of dress and ornament that characterized our apparel and once adorned the walls of our dwellings and places of public worship and amusement. Had we not done so we might have been glorious in our production of art and music, during these lost centuries instead of being the cheap and tawdry imitators that we are now.

We have no Rembrandts, no Raphaels, no Mozarts, no Verdis any more; and why? Because in the great moral upheaval of four centuries ago we condemned the things we then did as the work of the devil. Doubtless our forbears meant well. They proceeded on the principle that the saving of man's soul is the important thing, as, of course, it is. But they were very blind. The Puritanical idea was splendid in its self-effacement and self-sacrifice, but it was a mistake, just the same. It froze the world and turned its heart to ice.

That we have seen our error and have started out to undo it, is easily observable. Churches that ten years ago would not even permit a stained glass window, have them now in plenty, and also have turned again to flowers and lights and all the bright panoply of warmth and color that the soul longs for. Instead of solemn, unmusical hymns, we are now singing songs of joy that are real music. Instead of gray and black for daily garb, we are turning to colors. And the world is beginning to be glad in the old way once more. We are warming up.

FREE TRADE AND AMERICAN SHIPS.

The Wall Street Summary is worried because the American merchant marine is at so low an ebb. In an editorial article the paper says:

"Time was when American vessels flying the American flag were seen in every port. Protection altered that, and if we want to return to those days let us be honest about it and tell the country in direct language that the shipping interests will be the gainers—at the expense of our Federal treasury. In this, however, there would be a poetic justice: Protection would be mulcted to cure an evil of its creation, through withdrawals from its accumulations from high tariff imposts. As an artificial and punitive remedy it would be grimly humorous, but as an efficient step for an American merchant marine, at best, an uncertain experiment. The free laws of trade, the natural, unfettered forces of exchange and barter—the world's commercial factors—alone can do this."

Now that would be interesting if it were a correct view. But it is in all respects a false view, and therefore loses its interest except as one of the last futile attempts of a theoretical free trader to reason practically. It is true that the American flag once was seen almost universally in all seas at the masthead of American ships. But "protection altered that" not a bit. The American merchant marine was driven off the seas of the globe by free traders. They were better known as "rebels" in those days when the flag disappeared; it was a ship built by free traders in England for free traders in the Confederacy which did the nefarious work.

Nor has protection prevented the rebuilding of our merchant navy. When the war was over and the flag was run up to float again over the rebellious States, shipbuilding was not resumed on a large scale for several reasons, and protection did not figure among them.

We were crippled by the war financially and industrially. Our currency fell to about 40 cents on the dollar. English free trade ships could be bought only with gold if there had been no provision of law to prevent the purchase, and we had no gold to buy with. England had already begun the building of iron ships and our iron industry was not developed to a point where competition with English shipbuilders would have been possible. To build wooden ships would have been foolish. Had it not been for protection to our industries, we would be buying our iron products of all kinds, as well as our ships, from England to this day. Under protection we are building ships and good ones, and (under protection) almost as cheaply as they are built in England. If we had no protection, our ships, including warships, would be built abroad.

Why do we not go on building ships and competing with other countries now for the carrying trade of the world? Let us confess that it would be most desirable to do so. But while our merchant marine was "unprotected" from the free-trade-built Alabama, manned by free trade Democrats like Sims, England got all the trade into her hands. It is difficult to displace her. It is also difficult to compete with ships built in Germany, because labor is cheaper there than here, and it costs the Germans less to build and less to sail their ships.

Our most carefully protected merchant service is the one in which we [illegible] all the glories of free trade England. Only ships which fly Old Glory can do the carrying between domestic ports in the United States and under this quite effective protection we have a fleet doing business coastwise, lakewise, and riverwise, larger than England's. These vessels are all built in America and thousands of our people get twice as high wages for building them as English workmen get for building English ships under the "blessings" of free trade.

DID NOT SEE THE FLOWERS, ANYWAY.

The visiting Shriners were amazed at the wealth of flowers displayed in the parade on Friday. They had never before seen a city all covered with lovely bloom from "turret to foundation stone," its blossoms overflowing into all the streets, and spread over horses, vehicles and fire-engines, and tossed to visitors in literally a million bouquets.

But the visitors did not see the flowers of California. They only caught a glimpse of a few specimens. To see what flower-decked California really is they should seek the flowers in their "native lair," or to be exact, in their natural habitat. Go out into the mountains and out over the desert. The desert for flowers? That is the place. Such a desert never was dreamed of elsewhere as one sees Antelope Valley and parts of Death Valley these May days. Visit these broad plains where the yuccas stand, not like sentinels, but like soldiers in serried ranks, battalion after battalion, rank on rank, corps behind corps, and in solid squares miles long on each side, all lifting their long shafts of spotless white into the glorious sun to whose kiss they owe their existence! Go then to where the poppy flaunts his golden sheen, where his dainty cup is lost to sight, its perfect symmetry mingled in the profuse mass of blossoms, a hundred to every square yard of space, sweeping like living fire down one long hillside into the valley, leaping the valley in tongues of vivid flame, and flashing in broad stretches up the opposite hillside far as the eye can see. A city full of flowers? There are enough of these yucca pillars of white light, and of these golden-poppy carpets to fill to their borders some of the patches of territory they call States out there by the Atlantic.

And there are cultivated places where the mustard has broken away from the narrow limits of civilization and run wild again in riotous profusion that makes the landscape look as if the golden floors of Heaven had melted and been poured over the earth. When this is all told, go into the mountains and see the wild lilac, spirea, roses and a thousand other varieties of bloom that proclaim aloud their rivalry with the yucca and the poppy. And all over Death Valley tiny blossoms hugging close to the hot sand, but dyed in hues that defy nature's rainbow or man's artificial prism to match.

And yet you have not seen the wondrous, waxy leaves of the madroño, with his polished, painted stem, or the arbutus berries that light up the hilltop, and the sides of the arroyos late in the year.

The story must stop midway. There is no end to it.

THE GOOSE IS DEAD.

The building trades unionists in San Francisco find that they have no need to strike. The industry has done the striking for them.

Unions forced wages to from $6 to $9 a day. Then Hades broke out in other unions, and the banks find themselves compelled to withdraw their aid, and buildings cannot be put up without the aid of the "capitalistic class." Eastern people are less disposed to loan money in San Francisco as things go there than are those at home. So Pinhead McCarthy's pinhead is uncrowned, or might as well be. His power to rule by ruin is broken, and he might as well throw away his scepter.

There are no more geese to lay golden eggs for the San Francisco building trades unions. The poor geese have incontinently turned up their toes, webs and all, to the silent stars. What poor goose, whatever her nest-egg, could live in the midst of a hail of brickbats?

In all diseases the crisis must come soon or late. It has come in the epidemic of labor-union troubles which have been making the industrial world sick for years. There are signs in some cases that the crisis is past, and that the industrial patients will get better.

Here is the Labor World of Pittsburgh. In a recent editorial this journal unqualifiedly takes the same position as President Roosevelt on the three "labor leaders" on trial for murder in Idaho. Listen to this:

"The Labor World has not a word to utter regarding the guilt or innocence of Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone, in their present terrible position. We hope they are innocent and will be proved to be so, but what we want to point out is that their innocence of the preferred charge against them will not, in our estimation, exonerate them from the charge of preaching an industrial and social policy that is damning to the best interests of the wage workers of the country."

When all "leaders" of labor unionism in all parts of the country will get sense and courage enough to "lead" in this way, the troubles between labor and capital will cease and labor unions will meet no further opposition on the part of the employers of labor. All the antagonism to these organizations is the natural, necessary, inevitable outcome of the "leading" of men like Debs, Haywood, Pinhead McCarthy, Dick Cornelius and our own Smith of the Teamsters' Union, now so thoroughly discomfited here by the resolute stand of the employers as is Pinhead in San Francisco by the action of the banks, local and eastern.

VIVA EL PRINCIPE DE LAS ASTURIAS!

Loud rang the vivas of Spanish grandees and people when salvos of cannon announced the safe deliverance of the young Queen of Spain and that the infant was a boy, a Prince.

This birth of a boy fixes Spain on solid ground again. Those guns were salvos to the new-born Prince, and at the same time funeral peals over the grave of Carlism forever and aye. This Prince, if the smile of heaven continues to rest upon him, as we all wish it may, will in due time sit upon the throne of Leon and Castile. No Carlist plot can come between him and his rights. The thunders of all the guns in the British fleet and all the rifles of the British army will protect this baby's royal rights.

This means much to Spain. That kingdom has suffered in recent years from internal discord. Carlist pretenders and republican plots have threatened disruption time and time again. There will be no more of this. A stable government will give the country opportunity to work out her own regeneration. And this all the world is interested and will rejoice in.

We of California, owing the seeds of our civilization to Spanish pioneers, can well afford to rejoice with the people of old Spain, and with all people in whose veins flows the blood of the Conquistadores. We are glad to read that this young prince is a right sturdy boy, with lungs to shout out his wants and brawny muscles to kick if he does not get everything with the promptness due to a prince. He has the bright complexion of his Saxon mother, and when that is duly bronzed with ardent Spanish suns, especially if he has the lustrous eyes of his father's race, he will surely look "every inch a King." May he not only look, but be a King, wise in council and, if need be, brave on the battlefield as many of his ancestors have been!

And long live his good mother, the gentle Ena, now known as Queen Victoria! Like her grandmother, the long-loved Victoria of England, she proceeds to set her people a fine example in being the nurse to her princely son. The royal lips are to touch no plebeian breasts, and, above all, no rubber-necked bottle is to "mother" him. May he be as royal as the breasts that nourish him and as human as the Queen, with nothing of the bovine in his system as there is not to be in his nourishment!

THAT DARK BROWN TASTE.

RUSSIA IN THE FAR EAST.

With all her difficulties at home Russia is evidently looking for a future in the Far East. Recent dispatches say that it has been determined to double-track the entire Trans-Siberian Railroad at once. When it is remembered that this railroad is more than 5000 miles in length, the longest stretch of track in the world (although a number of American railroads such as the Southern Pacific and Santa Fé have much more trackage when branches and leased lines are included,) the magnitude of this undertaking will be more readily seen.

During the Japanese war one of the greatest handicaps the Russians had was the great distance from their base in Europe. The railroad was a single-track, with barely enough sidings to handle ordinary traffic, newly laid throughout and only for temporary use and a transfer was necessary at Lake Baikal, so it is a matter of surprise that transportation did not break down completely. To these disadvantages must be added those of the climate. One who has spent winters in parts of the Northwestern States or Canada may have some slight idea of the cold.

Under ordinary conditions the tri-weekly train de luxe runs from Moscow to Vladivostok (5261 miles) in seventeen days. This means an average of little over 300 miles in each twenty-four hours, or scarcely twelve miles an hour. The ordinary daily train takes twenty-one days. Much of this time is doubtless lost at stations, European trains often stopping much longer than is the general practice in America. The Europeans also employ what is known as the "flag" or "key" system of train dispatching over single-track lines, which does not permit such rapid movements or the operation of nearly so many trains as does the American method.

The climatic conditions referred to are, of course, a tremendous obstacle in the way of construction. With nine months of Arctic weather, with icy winds blowing and snowdrifts on all sides, building must necessarily be carried on very slowly. Years were spent in laying the present single track, but, of course, the fact that material can now be transported more rapidly and work carried on at both ends, should make it easier to rush the second track. It is, however, a tremendous undertaking. No American railroad has yet built a double track for over a fifth of the distance on one route, the longest being on several

The Lancer.

THE wisest people—"guys," to use their own term—on earth are the sports, the men who follow races, hang about at cigar stands, and know the odds on every gambling device invented. Oh, they are smart! And what cynical contempt they have for the "suckers" who go against their games, and for ordinary people who do not comprehend their thieves' jargon.

I confess to chortling with ghoulish glee when I see these rat-eyd, predatory vermin fooled, bedeviled and pillaged by others of the tribe. The easiest mark in the world is the sport who thinks he is "wise" to all the tricks and plays against the other fellow's game, and of all the suckers [illegible] the most foolish are those who take the bait of the prize-ring sharps.

Supporters of the prize-fight game in Los Angeles have been fooled and [illegible] time and again at the Na[illegible] [illegible] bunco joint. They have p[illegible] money to see the rankest of fakes perpetrated by louts too stupid to make their imitation fights look plausible. They have seen the gamblers who run the game work up the betting and frame up a fight to swindle the public.

But experience teaches them nothing. They swallowed all the blather of the bunco promoters about a $20,000 purse for O'Brien and Burns, and they fell into the trap laid by the [illegible] ass, O'Brien, for the foolish. Now they yelp that the fight was a fake and a fraud and the "honest" promoters coolly admit that there never was any purse; that the division of spoils was arranged by the [illegible] on a basis quite different from the terms given out to the public. The only thing that saved the money of the "wise guys" appears to have been the unwillingness of Burns to let a defeat go on his record—his story, he avers.

When Burns notified the promoters that he would not stand by the program fixed up for him, those scrupulously honest gentlemen declared all bets off and proclaimed proudly their [illegible] virtue and rectitude. They would not stand for a framed-up fight or anything tainted with fakery.

Did it not, come into the minds of the "wise guys" that the promoters had their money on O'Brien, believing that they had a sure thing, and stood to lose a lot of money if Burns should turn on him and lick him? Burns gave notice that he would beat Mr. O'Brien, and the promoters believed he was able to do so. There was no time to hedge. There was only one way to save their money, and they promptly declared their bets off.

There was no danger of O'Brien's wit and [illegible] skinning the innocent. The only danger was that the [illegible], who had their money on [illegible], would win the money of the [illegible]. Because the fight promoters [illegible] to be genuine and the referee could not be fixed to decide otherwise than on the merits of the men, all bets were declared off and the "wise guys" who had bet on Burns were [illegible] like a lot of farmers at a [illegible]. Burns won the fight and the decision, but his backers got [illegible]. The promoters of the clumsy [illegible] game are not in it for their [illegible].

[illegible] fraud! Of course it was. [illegible] has been a "main event" of consequence at the Naud [illegible] shinnery that was anything [illegible] and a fraud. The men [illegible] it are notorious tin-horns, [illegible] gamblers and law-breakers, [illegible] the "wise guys" play against [illegible] game and expect to win. [illegible] with them. When their hides are hung on the fence, their appearance is vastly improved.

Yahoo Manners.

It is the nature of the small boy to delight in noise, and he is to be forgiven, even when it is necessary to repress his ebullition, for making more noise than is to be endured patiently by the grown-ups. But The Lancer is one of those who can discover no good reason for tolerating the idiotic clamor with which holidays are celebrated in American cities. As manifestations of joy, the tooting of tin horns and the production of hideous sounds are not convincing. The rational people of Los Angeles and their guests cannot say honestly that Fiesta week was made more enjoyable to them by the ceaseless squawking of noise machines operated by fools and hoodlums on the streets. They endured the nuisance with wonderful patience, but they secretly wished that the police would club the heads of the stupid yahoos who swarmed through the streets and deafened them with the damnable din.

The hoodlums seemed to enjoy the performance. The more disagreeable they made themselves to everybody in their vicinity, the more they grinned and chortled. They considered themselves licensed to annoy and affront women and girls especially, and their only conception of a "good time" was making somebody uncomfortable.

The best that can be said for the leering, uncouth oafs is that they know no better, but they can be taught better, and Fiestas will be more joyous when the police attend to the correction of manners on the public streets with their good hard fists.

Alkali Sammy.

The difference between consistency and persistency is overlooked by some persons who have said to The Lancer that the Evening Pipedream has been consistent in its antagonism to the Owens River project. "It keeps at it all the time," they say, and they seem to think that is being "consistent."

Of course, the Pipedream keeps at it all the time; that is what the power companies and J. D. Hooker keep the paper going for. Alkali Sammy's job is to knock Mulholland and the aqueduct project, and if he were not persistent in lying about them, he would have to give up the job and seek honest employment, for which he is unfitted.

Sammy's favorite falsehood just now is that the water of Owens River is so full of alkali that it is unfit for any use, and he repeats that yarn with the persistency of a parrot learning to swear. But Alkali Sammy's consistency is another matter. A year ago he started in on that line and was checked by exposure of the fact that he had in his possession the reports of chemists showing the water to be better than that of the Los Angeles River. The samples analyzed were supplied by Sammy himself.

When he was called down, just a year ago, Sammy attempted to deny that he had suppressed the truth, and said editorially:

> Analysis of the water, both from the river and from Black Rock Spring, made for the Evening News, have shown it to be usable, though by no means of the purity claimed for it in certain quarters. As to the quality of the water, it is apparent that the nearer one gets to the source of the river the purer it becomes. At the proposed intake point a careful analysis proves it to have considerable mineral water, but not enough to render it unfit for domestic usage.

Sammy has forgotten that he was forced to admit the truth, even in his quibbling, dishonest way, at that time, and now he persists in the falsehood that Owens River water is poisonous. He says: "That the water is unfit to drink is as true as that the water is not there in sufficient quantity to supply a large city."

Just as true, surely. And just as true as Alkali Sammy's protestation that he is "sincere" and is not hired to serve the traitorous and sordid ends of the power companies.

Mayor Harper sized up Sammy's paper when he declared it to be a public pest and said it ought to be choked off.

THE LANCER.

EVAPORATION TO BE STUDIED.

[illegible] SECURED WILL SAVE A LARGE SUM YEARLY.

[illegible] States Geological Survey, [illegible] Bureau and Reclamation [illegible] to Co-operate—Unusual [illegible] Will Be Established [illegible] Sea.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE] CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.] [illegible], May 1.—The United States Geological Survey, the Weather Bureau and the Reclamation Service have arranged to coöperate at the Salton Sea in the most extensive study of evaporation and allied phenomena ever made. The flooding of the Salton Basin to a depth of about eighty feet caused great loss to property but it affords an unusual opportunity for the study of evaporation.

Here is an inland sea suddenly placed in an arid basin, in a warm climate where evaporation is great, and without any important water supply running into it. The restoration of the Colorado River to its old channel practically cut off all inflow to the sea. The [illegible] which remains can readily be measured and accounted for, and it is [illegible] necessary to observe the [illegible] of this great lake and [illegible] of the attendant climatic [illegible].

[illegible] of evaporation from water [illegible] in the arid country especially is highly important, because it is [illegible] in connection with the determination of the amount of water available for irrigation. A reservoir of [illegible] extent, constantly exposed to sun and wind, will lose by [illegible] sufficient water to irrigate [illegible]. So far, the measurements [illegible] been made are unsatisfactory [illegible] the hydraulic engineer desiring to know the rate of evaporation [illegible] only the old data that [illegible] may not be suitable for this [illegible].

[illegible], in determining the [illegible] of area that can be irrigated [illegible] reservoir, the engineer [illegible] allowance for the [illegible] of evaporation, and must determine the number of acres to be irrigated by that amount. In the case of [illegible] reservoir in Arizona, [illegible] estimated that the evaporation [illegible] amount to about six feet per [illegible] to the total area of [illegible] will be 16,320 acres, the [illegible] of water lost will be 97,920 [illegible] sufficient to irrigate 48,960 [illegible]. In estimating the number of [illegible] can be irrigated from the [illegible], it is necessary to [illegible] acres that might [illegible] lost for evaporation. [illegible] appreciated from this that [illegible] from reservoir surfaces is [illegible] important matter, and anything that can be done to provide precise [illegible] by which the engineer can [illegible] computations will [illegible] a saving of enormous [illegible].

[illegible] committee from the three bureaus represented, consisting of W. C. Mendenhall, for the Geological Survey, C. F. Marvin for the Weather Bureau and C. E. Grunsky, for the Reclamation Service, has recently made a proposal for the evaporation work that has been approved by the various bureaus, and the work will be carried on under the direction of Prof. Frank Bigelow of the Weather Bureau, and Dr. G. K. Gilbert of the Geological Survey.

The recommendations, in brief, are that the observations be continued over several years and that they be undertaken as soon as possible after the summer floods of 1907, provided the protective structures which have been built to force the Colorado River into its normal channel withstand these floods. Since the results are primarily a contribution of meteorology, although of the greatest value of engineers, the observations will be made by trained representatives of the Weather Bureau. Supplementary studies of the character of the basin, inflow of surface waters and subsurface waters and of engineering and geological questions that may arise will be carried on by the Geological Survey.

The expense of installing unusual and expensive equipment will be borne by the three coöperating bureaus. Prof. Bigelow and Dr. Gilbert will meet for conference at Yuma, Ariz., on or about May 10, and will proceed to the Salton Basin to determine upon the details of the investigation.

BOUND FOR MEXICO.

Many Shriners Will Visit Metropolis of Southern Republic, Where Anezeh Temple Will Entertain.

Included in the itinerary of quite a number of the Shriners who have been visiting Los Angeles the past week is a journey down into the Land of Mañana and a visit to the City of Mexico.

The trip will have an additional interest to many of the prominent Shriners, as it was there the first Shriners' temple in the southern republic was instituted, and it is also the last of the temples of North America to be established.

This was done last January by Illustrious Potentate Clayton, and the name of Anezeh Temple was given the new body. Members of this temple have been active in the past week's festivities here, and they have been the recipients of various social functions planned in their honor.

Imperial Potentate Clayton says of the institution of this first Shriners' temple in Mexico:

"The order was conferred upon a class of eighty novices. The high class of the novices who received the order at this ceremonial session convinced me beyond a doubt of the wisdom of establishing a temple of our order in the metropolis of our sister republic.

"It was a proud moment for me to have the opportunity of creating as Nobles of the Mystic Shrine Gen. Don Porfirio Diaz, President of the republic of Mexico; Lic. Ignacio Mariscal, Secretary of Foreign Affairs; Gen. Alonzo Flores of the army, and the seventy-four other distinguished men and Masons of Mexico City who comprised the class."

While a good-sized delegation of the Mexican Shriners have made the pilgrimage to Los Angeles, there are still enough at home to make provision for a reception of the visitors from various points in the United States who will make the southern journey before turning homeward. Plans have been made for a general public reception and various side excursions.

FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

Committee of Military Organizations Request That People Refrain from Devoting It to Sport.

The general Memorial Committee of the Grand Army of the Republic, Sons of Veterans, and Spanish War Veterans have issued a call upon citizens to generally observe Memorial Day as sacred to the memory, not only of those who died in the service of their country, but of other friends who lie in the city of the dead.

The members of the organizations mentioned, and kindred societies, will meet at their headquarters and proceed from there to the different cemeteries to decorate the graves of the soldiers, and all persons are requested to pay the same tribute to their own dead.

In the afternoon services will be held in different churches, doing away with the old-time large patriotic meetings, and the committee asks that people unite in an effort to prevent its being made a gala day of sports.

MOTORMAN KEEPS COOL.

Averts Collision With Buggy and Fallen Horse and Calms Excited Passengers.

The prompt action of the motorman of car No. 332 of the Washington-street line averted an accident yesterday afternoon. A large sorrel horse, hitched to a buggy, slipped on the pavement on South Main street and fell.

The street car was thirty feet away and approaching rapidly. It seemed impossible that it could be stopped in time to avoid a collision, but the motorman turned off the power and applied the brakes, bringing the car to a stop just as the fender touched the rear wheel of the buggy.

There was a crowd on the car, and those on the front platform, in anticipation of a smash, prepared to jump. The motorman kept cool and calmed the excited.

PUBLIC SERVICE.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

The Mayor has received from colored voters a communication commending him for his activity in securing the passage of an anti-race discrimination ordinance.

City Auditor Mushet declined yesterday to approve demands for overtime from clerks in the Tax Collector's office. The Auditor says that overtime demands from salaried employés are not valid.

José Guerra was sentenced by Judge Smith to sixty days in jail yesterday for using a knife on an ex-convict.

Judge Houser yesterday granted an interlocutory decree of divorce to Addie Parker. J. P. Parker is said to have had many wives and to have posed as an English lord.

In his examination in the Police Court yesterday, Thomas Maxey, who shot at Detective Ziegler, declared that his gun play was intended for a gambler. Maxey was held for trial in the Superior Court.

Mrs. A. A. Allen forgave her husband in the Police Court yesterday and refused to prosecute him for having attempted to kill her.

The three billboard cases were argued before three justices yesterday and a decision as to the validity of the ordinance will be handed down early in the week.

AT THE CITY HALL.

FIGHT SCANDAL MAKING STIR.

PROHIBITIVE ORDINANCE MAY BE THE RESULT.

Rank Fake Perpetrated on the Public Wednesday Night by O'Brien, McCarey and Burns at High Prices, Leads to Bringing Up of Proposed Measure to Stop the Game.

The City Hall is agitated again by rumors of a prohibitive boxing ordinance. Indignant at the reports of the Burns-O'Brien fiasco, the anti-prize-fight contingent has persuaded City Attorney Hewitt to send back to the Council the boxing ordinance which was considered and rejected two weeks ago.

The City Attorney is of the opinion that the exhibitions held at the boxing pavilion are prize-fights—when they are not prize fakes. The "antis" claim generally that a boxing exhibition, as contemplated by the State law, would be hooted out of the ring. The great objection to recent contests has been that the participants did too much sparring and too little actual fighting.

Just now a feeling of disgust over the fighting game, as made a farce of here, prevails at the City Hall. This feeling may influence the opinions of a number of Councilmen, but it is not likely to have any marked effect on their votes.

Seemingly, it will require a great deal more pressure of public opinion than has yet been exerted to induce the Council to pass an ordinance that would stop boxing at the Naud Junction fiasco pavilion.

COMMEND NEW LAW.

COLORED VOTERS GRATEFUL.

Mayor Harper received yesterday the following communication commending him for securing the passage of an anti-race-discrimination ordinance:

I have read with pleasure and gratification of the passage of an ordinance by the Council abolishing objectionable signs in saloons, restaurants and other places of public convenience, aimed at negroes as a race and discriminating against them as a class.

I have been made to believe that this ordinance is the result of a special message submitted by you to the Council, and I take this method of extending to you my appreciation of your manly stand.

I am the pastor of over [illegible] souls in your city, composing the membership of the First A. M. E. Church. A more progressive, intellectual and wealthy congregation of negroes is not to be found in this country.

I believe that I speak authoritatively when I say that they join with me in expressing their approval of what you have done.

I regret that my people ever discovered these signs in saloons, but as they are now abolished, it will not in any sense encourage them to patronize saloons, which at best are only a curse to a people, especially to a race as weak as mine. On the other hand, as they are recognized as places of public utility, we appreciate the spirit of fair play that moved you in causing this ordinance to pass.

May God ever multiply and increase your kind, of which our nation stands much in need.

(Signed) WILLIAM H. PECK.
Pastor, First A. M. E. Church,
Los Angeles.

The ordinance referred to is one making it a misdemeanor to post in any public place a notice to the effect that colored patronage is not wanted, or that colored customers will not be served.

The ordinance is not as drastic as it appears at first reading. It does not penalize the refusal to serve a colored customer, but only the posting of notices that such refusal will be made.

Property Owners Protest.

Property owners living on Sixteenth and Essex streets are protesting against the grant of a permit for a feed and sale stables on the west side of Central avenue, south of Sixteenth street. They assert that the owner is leasing the property to colored tenants and that the location is not a suitable one for such a business. The application for the permit has not been filed with the fire board, but it is expected to appear at the next meeting.

No Pay for Overtime.

City Auditor Mushet returned to the Council without his approval, yesterday, demands for overtime in the amount of $200 from the clerks in the office of the Tax Collector. The overtime is for the closing days of the tax season.

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

SENTENCED FOR FACE CARVING.

STONE-THROWING RESENTED BY KNIFE THRUSTS.

Jose Guerra Gets Sixty Days in Jail—Explains Job Is Ready for Him If He Can Escape With Small Fine, but Court Thinks Otherwise and He Goes to Jail.

Jose Guerra, a shriveled little man with an unquiet expression in his black eyes which seemed to indicate that he might be expected to resent an insult, pleaded guilty to simple assault yesterday, and was sentenced to sixty days in the County Jail by Judge Smith.

Guerra had been charged with assault with a deadly weapon, having carved the countenance of one Pomposo Tiero, an ex-convict, on April 28. Tiero, it appears, previously had struck Guerra with a stone in Hollywood. The insult and the injury had rankled in the mind of Jose.

On April 28, on the street in Los Angeles, Guerra saw his enemy, in company with another man, seemingly following him. He turned back at the door of a restaurant he was about to enter, and, with a pocket knife, hacked at the face of Tiero. The latter ran and Guerra pursued.

The pursuit proved the undoing of Señor Guerra, to the extent of sixty days in jail, for there was so much doubt as to which had been the aggressor in the disturbance that Guerra might have been freed had he not followed his enemy when the latter fled. As it was, he was permitted to plead guilty to simple assault.

The culprit stated that he had a job he wished to go to work at, and that his employer would advance money for a fine if a small one was imposed. Judge Smith looked at him dubiously.

"I have in mind a sixty-day sentence," said the judge. "That would be equivalent to a $120 fine. He surely can't pay that?"

Apparently he could not, for Guerra went back to jail.

ONE OF MANY WIVES.

ADDIE PARKER GETS DIVORCE.

Addie Parker yesterday was granted an interlocutory decree of divorce from J. P. Parker by Judge Houser.

Addie Reich, as she was before her marriage to the alleged adventurer, is said to have been one of many wives acquired by Parker. He posed as an English lord during ten or twelve years previous to his appearance in Los Angeles, it is alleged.

The marriage to Miss Reich took place on July 11, 1905. What he expected to gain by the marriage does not appear, as it is averred that he had been in the habit of seeking money in his matrimonial alliances, and Miss Reich was not possessed of wealth.

Six weeks after the marriage, the supposed lord left suddenly and quietly. He wrote once to his latest wife, however, from Salem, Or., advising her to secure a divorce, stating that he was growing too fat for domestic life, and would not return to her.

Mrs. Parker declared her belief that her husband had secured $850 on a forged check before leaving.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.

BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

HABEAS CORPUS. Elmer C. Androus, seeking to escape the penalty for contempt of court imposed on him by Judge Hutton on May 3, was in Judge Bordwell's court yesterday on habeas-corpus proceedings. He had been committed to jail because of his failure to pay $10 per week alimony to his wife, Norma C. Androus, as ordered at the time the latter secured an interlocutory decree of divorce. The point made by counsel for Androus was that he had not been ordered into court on May 3 to show cause why he had not complied with the order of the court, but had come there because of an order made before the question of his failure to pay alimony had arisen. His explanation of his failure to pay was that his salary of $25 per week sufficed only to support his mother and himself. The case was continued.

NEW COUNSEL ASKED. H. H. Appel appeared in the Superior Court yesterday to ask that counsel be appointed to defend Francisco Estrada, charged with murder, whose trial is set for May 16. Appel declared that Estrada's attorneys, Messrs. Brooks & Wills, had not been to see him, to make arrangements for the defense. The matter was continued until tomorrow, when Attorney Wills is to be asked if it is his purpose to drop the case.

THE INFERIOR COURTS.

SENSATIONAL IS HIS CHARGE.

BUT PRISONER CAN'T SUPPORT CLUBBING STORY.

Thomas Maxey, in Police Court, Says He Shot at Gambler, Not at Detective Ziegler—Held for Trial, Mrs. Allen Forgives Husband's Attempt to Kill Her.

Thomas Maxey, who is accused of assault with intent to murder, in that he shot at Detective Ziegler, was yesterday held for trial in the Superior Court under a $5000 bond. In the trial Maxey made a somewhat sensational charge against Police Sergeant Peterson and Patrolman Roy Allen, but he did not seem to have any evidence to support the accusation.

Maxey, in cross-examination conducted by himself, asked Allen why he and Peterson used force in getting an alleged confession. The prisoner said that the sergeant struck him with a club. The officer replied that this was impossible, as steel bars intervened between them at the time.

Maxey claimed that he was shooting at a gambler named Bragg, and not at Ziegler.

Wife Won't Prosecute.

A. A. Allen, whose wife saved her life by taking from him the gun with which he was trying to shoot her at their home, No. 1301 West Twenty-fifth street, nearly a month ago, was given a suspended sentence on a battery charge in the Police Court yesterday. He had been in jail for more than three weeks. The woman did not want to prosecute him, as she said she thought he was drunk when he sought her life. She appeared to have become reconciled to her husband, for the two left the courtroom together, apparently on the best of terms.

Billboard Cases.

The three billboard cases were argued yesterday before three police justices—Austin, Frederickson and Chambers. This was done to expedite the matter, and decision as to the validity of the present ordinance will be handed down early in the week. Varney & Green, George J. Cote and the Los Angeles Realty Sign Company are the defendants. The arguments made yesterday were purely technical.

MORE CARNATIONS.

Twenty-five Thousand to Be Given Away by "The Times" Wednesday.

Those "Sea Breeze" carnations are taking so well that The Times will give away 25,000 more on Wednesday at the Made in Los Angeles exhibition. So many expressions of appreciation have come from the ladies who have received the flowers that it has been decided to make more people happy. The remarkable beauty and fragrance of these blossoms from the gardens of the Signal Hill Floral Company have attracted great attention during Fiesta week.

SAYS HE'S BLACK SHEEP.

Man Claiming to Be Heir of Deceased New York Millionaire Charged With Defrauding.

T. F. Morris, who claims to be an heir to the late Gouverneur Morris's millions and a wealthy stock man of New York State, was arrested twice yesterday on misdemeanor warrants. The police first sent him to the City Jail for drunkenness, and when he was released last night, he was taken in charge by township officers. He is charged with defrauding.

Morris says that he is the black sheep of the family; that he came West some months ago, and has spent his money. He met a man at Terminal Island, and, upon the promise that he would pay the man for his board and lodgings, he secured sums of money and his board for some time, according to the officers. The man who befriended Morris is said to be J. Clark.

Recently, the police say, Morris received a draft for a large sum, and Clark asked for a settlement. Morris is alleged to have shown gross ingratitude and to have evaded Clark. Clark secured a warrant two days ago.

Morris first attracted attention yesterday by throwing away about $500 along South Main street. Over $150 in silver were found upon his person when he was searched at the City Jail. Later, it was found that he had $1000 in bills sewed in his clothing.

LECTURE ON REPTILES.

On Monday evening Prof. Joseph Grinnell of Throop Institute will lecture on "The Reptiles of Los Angeles County" at the Pacific College of Osteopathy. The lecture will be under the auspices of the biological section of the Academy of Sciences of Southern California. The public is invited.

CONCERT IN WESTLAKE.

This afternoon at 2 o'clock there will be a concert in Westlake Park, given by the Majestic Band, which promises good music.

ORIGIN OF THE UNION JACK.

The British Colors Were Formed by the Combination of Three Crosses.

The British union jack, the King's colors, combines three crosses—the cross of St. George, the cross of St. Andrew and the cross of St. Patrick—all on a blue field. The union of these three crosses occurred in an interesting fashion. Primarily England's flag displayed a red cross on a white ground. The white cross of St. Andrew made its appearance side by side with that of St. George during the reign of James I., the Scottish King, who ascended the throne of England. It was not until later, however, in 1707, that the two crosses were combined on the one banner and the white emblem of St. Andrew ran from corner to corner of the blue field and crossed the red emblem of St. George.

Nearly a century later the red diagonal cross of St. Patrick found a place on the same flag. It was after the Irish Parliament was united to the British that this change took place.

In England it is stipulated that all colors, as flags are termed, shall be hand-made. At first they were the work of women members of regimental families, but later the privilege was given to contractors, who number less than half a dozen, it is said. If, however, the wives and daughters of officers want to make colors for their regiments they are permitted to do so, but as a rule, these regimental colors are submitted to the garter king at arms for his approval before they are presented to the regiments for which they have been made.

INVESTIGATING DEATH.

Iowa Young Woman Took Poison Just to See What Death Was Like.

Claiming that she did it just for fun and wanted to see how it would seem to watch the blood stop in the ends of her fingers and the nails turn blue, Carrie Mattison, aged 21, of Sioux City, Ia., took strychnine and died within an hour.

In the best of spirits, the girl went about the home of Frank Richardson, where she lived, and about noon went to the cellar. On emerging she remarked that she had taken a dose of that "poison down there."

Doubting the statement, Mrs. Richardson questioned her, but noticed that the girl was frothing at the mouth. A physician was called and every effort was made to find why the young woman should take poison.

Just before she passed away, she said with her last breath:

"I did it just for fun. I wanted to see what death was like."

The dead girl was the daughter of R. H. Mattison of Battle Creek, Ia., a farmer. She appeared in good spirits and had no love affairs or disappointments.

COMPRESSION OF STEEL.

New Machinery Installed in France for Making Warship Material.

A large amount of orders for material for destroyers and submarines for France have been received by the steel works at St. Etienne, and already these mills are being considerably enlarged so as to meet the demands. The principal transformations refer to the addition of shops for compressing steel and a new foundry.

Of all the methods of compressing steel, that invented by Mr. Harmet, engineer at St. Etienne, which compresses by trefilage, is considered the best, and new presses have been established by which ingots of thirty tons can be worked, whereas hitherto not more than twelve-ton ingots could be employed. The new constructions comprise two Martin furnaces of twenty tons and furnished with machinery of the latest perfection. Among the new features of these extensive mills is the manufacture of cemented steel plates for battleships, and a large order for these plates has been received from the admiralty.—[Consular Report.

Truth About the Cow.

A worthy squire had a cow that always kicked and reared when milked. He decided to get rid of it, and calling one of his farm hands, told him to take it to the market.

"Sell the brute," he said, "but mind you, tell no lies. I've been unlucky in my purchase, but that's no reason why I should deceive others."

Two hours later the man returned from market with a larger sum than the squire expected. "I'm sure you lied about that cow," he said.

"Not a bit of it," replied the man, "every time I was asked if she was a good milker, I simply said: 'You'll get dead tired of milking before you get all her milk.'"—[Exchange.

It's Worth Remembering.

That gossips never secure "permanent jobs."

That happiness is found only when you look within, not without.

That love may be ever so great, but must also be wise, to grow.

That a fool is never so foolish but that he may teach another fool something.

That to be poor without losing self-respect or a sense of enjoyment is a fine art.

That kindness of any true sort must be expressed in terms of the recipient, not of the donor.

That capability marks some men, and importance others, but that indispensability attaches to none.

That friendship which is genuine may invariably be recognized in that it is neither jealous nor selfish.

That indolence among the rich is more to be condemned than ignorance among the poor. The rich know better.

That intellectual worth is most clearly shown in the complete and accurate knowledge of one's own abilities.

That mediocrity, provided it be persevering, accomplishes more than fitful talent. Hares and tortoises still run races.—[Success Magazine.

The Irishman's Dream.

A traveler lately returned from Ireland has a story illustrating the ready wit of the Irishman. An old gardener, meeting his employer, touched his finger to the tip of his cap and said;

"Good morning, yer honer, oi had a fine drame of ye last night."

"Indeed, Michael," remarked the employer. "What was the dream?"

"Oi dramed thot ye gave me a fine box o' tobaccy, an' thot her ladyship, yer honored wife, gave me humble wife a can o' th' best tay."

"Thin," said Michael, "maybe ye'll be after givin' me wife th' tobaccy an' her ladyship'll give me th' tay."—[Harper's Weekly.

To Correspondents:

This department is not conducted for pay. Its object is to convey reliable information of interest and value to the public and it is not for the private benefit of any miner, collector, speculator or prospector. Correspondents are particularly cautioned to take careful note of the statements and injunctions contained in the paragraphs below:

(1.) Specimens must be small and bear a tag giving name and address of sender, and the general—not exact—locality from whence the specimen was taken, also the name of it as nearly as the sender knows. Send, also, with the specimen, a clearly written letter briefly describing the find and what the finder wishes done with it. The letter must be properly dated and plainly signed.

(3.) No examination of samples or specimens will be made in cases where The Times may decide that the specimen and inquiry are not of public interest. This office does not undertake to perform the work of an assay office.

(4.) Inquiries relative to matters of purely personal interest will not be answered.

(5.) When no response to an inquiry made or specimens sent appears in these columns, the inquirer will understand that his inquiry does not come within the purview of this department.

(6.) It is impossible to return specimens, as they must necessarily be destroyed or impaired in the process of analysis.

Address invariably, The Times.

Nagyatite.

KINGHAM (Ariz.) April 28, 1907.—[To the Editor of The Times:] There is quite a dispute among my friends over the ore herein inclosed. It is a volatile compound, sure. I sent some of it to a Philadelphia ore buyer, offering it as sylvanite; it was returned to me with the statement: "Not desired."

There is a small lead of the material, where found, near Magnolia, Colo.

Please give me a description of the ore in The Times and greatly oblige

Yours truly, T. M. R.

ANSWER.—Your sample is known as telluride of lead among miners. Its mineralogical name is nagyatite. Color, usually, lead gray; streak color, gray. In hardness, 1.7 to 2.4. Tectile, with scaly habit and interspersed structure. Sp. gr., 6.8 to 7. "B. B., two coats on charcoal, most distant white and volatile; that nearest substance yellow." There is also an iron black variety of nagyatite with black gray streak. Tetragonal in crystallization and of massive structure.

Sulphates of Soda and of Magnesia.

LOS ANGELES, April 30, 1907.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Please distinguish between glauberite, glauber salt, and epsomite, in your "In the Earth."

Kindly describe the three minerals and give tests and formula.

Yours truly, DR. C. P. G.

ANSWER.—Glauber salt occurs in efflorescent crusts and earthy; gray or white yellow in color and of vitreous luster in the fresh fracture. It falls into powder in the atmosphere. Brittle. Cooling taste at first, then saline and bitter. Hardness, 1.4 to 2.2. That from Nova Scotia analyzed by Haw resulted as follows: Sodium sulphate 44.54, water 55.46 percentages respectively. It melts in its water of composition in the matrass. Glauber salt is native sodium sulphate. Glauberite is a double sulphate of sodium and lime, with analysis of: Sulphuric acid, 67.22; soda, 11.22; lime, 20.68; iron, 0.14; total, 99.26 per cent. "B. B., decrepitates and then melts to a clear glass. Glauberite is so called in consequence of its containing a very large amount of Glauber's salt."

Glauberite in primary form resembles glauber salt, but it "occurs crystallized in the form of oblique and extremely flat rhombic prisms, of a pale yellow or gray color. Streak white. Brittle." Conchoidal (quartz like) in fracture; with a saline taste. "Wehn immersed in water becomes opaque, and is partly dissolved." Hardness from 2.4 to 3.2. Glauberite is heavier sp. gr.) than glauber salt.

Epsomite is native epsom salt, and when pure is composed of 16.26 per cent. of magnesia; 32.52 sulphuric acid and 51.22 of water. It is, furthermore, native magnesium sulphate; and occurs in botryoidal masses and efflorescent forms. Brittle, with a saline and very bitter taste. Hardness and specific gravity about 2 each. "B.B. dissolves very easily by the assistance of water of crystallization, but is difficulty fusible. Soluble in less than double its weight of cold water."

Please mark the following important chemical distinction: The aqueous solutions of glauberite and glauber salt do not yield a precipitate with lime water; that of epsomite does afford a precipitate with lime water.

A Fair Grade Talc.

REDLANDS, April 29, 1907.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I inclose under separate cover a sample of mineral found near our property. Will you kindly let us know what it is?

Various persons have seen this and some think it has a commercial value.

Very truly yours,

B. L. & B. CO.

Not Spalerite.

AMBOY, April 26, 1907.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Will you please tell me through your "In the Earth" if the sample I send you is sphalerite, if not, what is it?

It is from a large ledge in the Bullion Mountains, this county. Have had it assayed and get 25 cents silver per ton ore. An answer will greatly oblige many. Respectfully yours, F. V.

ANSWER: It is surprising that an oolitic quartzite like the sample should run so low in precious metal values. Sphalerite is zinc blende (black Jack of the miners). No sphalerite is contained in the specimen.

Amblygonite.

SAN DIEGO, April 24, 1907.—[To the Editor of The Times:] My work is that of a tenderfoot prospector. By this post I send you, under separate cover, a sample of what I believe to be quartz. Will you please describe the sample—if I err in its correct mineralogical association—and greatly oblige.

D. B. A.

ANSWER: Your specimen represents a mineral which in time will be largely used in commercial quantities: it is known as amblygonite—phosphate of alumina and lithia, combined with double fluoride of lithium and aluminum.

The mineral occurs massive and in rhombic prisms. Colors, white, greenwhite and pale sea-green. Vitreous and pearly in luster. In hardness 6. Sp. gr., 3 to 3.5. Before the blowpipe a chip of the mineral fuses, and is white after fusing. It is soluble in sulphuric acid. There are known large deposits of the mineral near Pala. The analysis following shows approximately the valuable elements combined in amblygonite: Phosphoric acid, 47.15 (nearly one-half of the substance;) alumina 38.62; lithia, 7.03; soda, 3.29; potash, 0.43; fluorine, 8.11. Total, 104.44 percentage, respectively.

Special Low Rates East.

The Washington-Sunset Route has commenced the sale of tickets at reduced rates to Washington, D. C., New York and other eastern points, by way of the Jamestown Exposition at Norfolk, Va. An opportunity to visit Old Mexico at cost of 10 cents, and stop-over at New Orleans available.

Baldwin Refrigerators for Government Hospitals

...Twenty-Second Year...

The Baldwin Refrigerator Company has been notified that its proposal to furnish the U. S. public health and marine hospital service with refrigerators for the current fiscal year has been accepted, making the twenty-second consecutive year that this important branch of the government service has adopted the Baldwin dry air refrigerator for use in all its hospitals and quarantine stations. So highly were these refrigerators regarded by the surgeons and stewards as far back as 1884-1885, that one of them was included in the government exhibit at World's exposition, New Orleans, marked "Standard refrigerator for hospital use."—Burlington Free Press, August 18, 1906.

CITY PROSPECTOR'S DESERT GOLD HUNT.

BY JOHN S. DAGGETT.

The author at his daily gold-hunting grind on the desert.

I WAS born in Missouri—Kansas City to be exact. I was never proud of the fact until I went prospecting. Every one who undertakes to dabble in mining should first be born in Missouri.

And I might add, that I firmly believe that it would be better if every young man went prospecting at least once. The greatest charm of the undertaking is the return to civilization. The thousand-and-one little things which men fret and fume about in the long humdrum of life all disappear. Prospect in Nevada six months and you will return to home and office with that "Nothing-can-make-me mad" feeling which will surmount all difficulties.

You may feel a bit unsteady when you cast aside the heavy hob-nailed boots and dodge across Broadway for the first time, but you have found a new tone in a symphony that was growing hackneyed.

"It seems to be the fad to have a mine in Nevada," said a wealthy New York man, as he sat in the lobby of the Alexandria six months ago. "If you can locate one Walter L. Bell, who has been in the mining business thirty-five years and who is a good prospector, I will send you with him into Nevada. Perhaps you are lucky."

Locate him? Why I had a wire chasing him into Arizona in ten minutes and ten days later Mr. Bell and I threw down the bars of a corral in Barstow and punched five pesky burros into a highway leading to the mountains.

They were pesky; there is no other word for it, and I little dreamt how hard the trip would be.

Burros being at a premium at all outfitting points, we purchased our pack animals in Pasadena. Two of them had been raised as children's pets in Pomona and had been fed on sugar and table lettuce; one was wild as a jack rabbit, with a love for the hilltops; the other two were good, steady animals, understanding what was expected of them.

We spent two days in Barstow arranging our outfit, carefully allotting the weights, going over straps and ropes and getting everything shipshape. On the morning of our departure we were up long before the sun, groping in a dense fog. There was never a morning in the months that followed when the sun found us napping and many times the ice had to be broken in the canteen to get water for the hurried breakfast. Those curious ones, always found around mining camps, who delight in the trials and tribulations of a prospector, assembled to see us start. And no sooner were three of those burros packed than they lay down with grunts and groans. It was then that I learned how to "tail a burro." It was very hard not to learn other things at the same time.

"TAILING" THE BURRO.

Mr. Burro's front legs were yanked from under him and straightened out; a strong hand grasped his tail, close up; another hand was thrust under the pack on the lower side and 250 pounds of man suddenly lifted, accompanied by a wild roar that frightened every hen in the barnyard off her nest. Mr. Bell was slightly red in the face, but the burro was standing. Long ears lying back denoted stubbornness and foretold further trouble. Mr. Bell cut the brush off a broomstick. "A carrajo pole is a good educator," he said. We used to cut notches for the number of "lay-downs" in a day. That pole became a fancy bit of carving, but we had to stop as its strength was endangered. However, after days of torture, it was but necessary to raise the stick and Mr. Burro would arise hurriedly and with dispatch overtake the gentle leaders of the pack train. Even a burro can be educated with patience.

Many prospectors maintain that burros are "the only thing" for the business. I am convinced that two mules and a wagon will prove far more satisfactory. The mules will haul more than five burros will pack; consume less water, and if they are desert mules, will graze wherever a burro will. The wagon can be hauled as far as possible; it may then be cached with safety and throwing the pack saddles on the mules, the side trips can be made with ease.

But we started with the desert mocking birds and had no choice but to drive them on, keeping a weather eye out for a favorable trade. The swap came in Greenwater, and think of it! A Times reporter swapped outfits with C. E. Blunt, the president of the Miners' Union. Poor burros, I have long since forgotten their ear marks, but am sure that I could identify any of them with the carrajo pole. They would hardly fail to recognize it. They had no union labels, however.

Prospecting is hard enough at best and no man should make a martyr of himself by attempting it alone. While the dangers of the desert have been grossly exaggerated in fiction, nevertheless, the man alone does run a great risk. Should mishap come to him in passing down some precipitous cañon, he might have to crawl miles, or lie where he fell until the sun set into eternal twilight. That is also one reason why a prospector should never be separated from his canteen. I have climbed all day over the mountains without becoming thirsty, and felt that the weight of the water was a burden, yet never have I spilled the precious fluid on the sands.

On those trips, what is perhaps the hardest thing about prospecting is realized—the discouraging thought, as weary you stand on some high peak and see a little white spot far down on the mesa below, "That is the camp and I have got to go way back there." Mayhap on another mountain top across the valley stands your partner with the same thought. Is it little wonder that after the sagebrush has been grubbed for the fire and the spare meal eaten, one is ready to roll into his blankets?

THE DAILY LIFE.

The question has been asked me, "What was your daily life on your trip?" I will sketch a bit of the journey. When we finally left Barstow is was only to walk into a heavy rainstorm, and early in the afternoon we were forced to make camp. Before our outfit had all been safely nested under canvas covering, we were thoroughly soaked. That first fire consumed many matches and much patience in the lighting. The ground we slept upon was wet and the wind howled dismally late into the night. When the rain ceased the wind died down and we awoke in the gray of dawn to find everything frozen.

The hardship of that day was a crucial test. Partner's first duty was to gather in the burros while I built the fire and prepared breakfast. Stiffened fingers struggled with new ropes as the packs were tightened with the diamond hitch, and a few minutes later the Mojave River had to be forded. In wet boots we tramped on, "tailing" a burro more than once in the twenty-two miles we walked that day. At 4 o'clock we made camp at Lane's Wells. Paradise Springs, which we reached the following night, must have been named by some prospector dying of thirst; it is a mudhole surrounded by a few scrawny willows, anything but a paradise. Several days we traveled on from spring to spring, discussing the formation of the mountains through which we were passing, and ever studying the float rock at the mouths of cañons and washes. Extensive dry lakes, slippery when wet, and all cracked and baking when dry, were crossed. In that section, wood, water and burro feed are all very scarce, and we had to figure closely on our day's marches. Reaching the Avawatz, we were driven out of Cave Springs by the snow, frozen out of Deming Springs by weather conditions which it was said had never been known there before, and finally reached Saratoga Springs.

From this point we traveled eighty-five miles through Death Valley, radiating from the watering places in the floor of the great sink into the Panamint Mountains on the west and the Funeral range on the east. Each day was very much like that preceding, being spent in moving on or searching for mineral indications. Had I a dollar for every piece of rock we broke from outcropping or from float I would have a mint instead of a mine; and to be honest we did not get a mine. They are not picked up every day; they are few and far between.

ALL OPTIMISTS.

But generally speaking, all prospectors are optimists. Poor today, we will be rich tomorrow. There is always a better field just a little farther on in yonder mountain range, showing dimly blue against the horizon. The chance in a thousand of being the one to "strike it rich" is strangely sufficient to spur the prospector forward, no matter how great the hardship. So with us; when we got our mules and wagon in Greenwater, with the addition of a tent and a sheetiron stove, a new zest came, and we took a big jump over into southeastern Nevada, in the Virgin River country. All the romance of prospecting had been long before washed away by torrential rainstorms or bleached out by a burning sun. But jaws were set and that determination "to make good" came as a better impetus. It is hard to come back without the fortune that all men are supposed to get when they go prospecting. It is even hard to be logical. We saw men working their finger nails off on quartz stringers less than half a foot wide showing a little copper stain. Their hopefulness, yes confidence, was almost pathetic. But I had been taught by my conservative partner, that in mining it is best to believe one-tenth what you hear and to doubt everything you see. Also, that there is no danger of race suicide among the wild cats.

OLD THINGS CHANGED.

Prospecting is becoming more and more a matter of business. The woof of romance cast about the life in the early days of California, when men "gophered" for pockets of gold and panned precious nuggets from mountain streams, has been torn away. The Bret-Harteism of the western mining camp is gone. Gold dust is no longer bartered over the rough counters; even the singlejack and double hammer are giving way to a modern giant, the machine drill. Dim trails have become well-beaten roads; powder is delivered by the carload almost at the very shaft hole; vast desert areas are combed with a fine tooth comb by 8000 prospectors, and the public at large is becoming more intimately associated with a great and growing industry. Undoubtedly the city man does not realize the wonderful developments that are taking place in the mining regions of Nevada. The movement is going with a rush and a swing, promising a splendid future for that State and opening new markets and rare opportunities for Los Angeles and the whole western coast.

MURDERESS IS DYING?

Reported That Slayer of R. S. Perry is Sinking at Her Home Near Anaheim.

Miss Margaret Williamson, slayer of Richard Saunders Perry in this city two years ago, is reported to be dying at the home of Mrs. Marie Sittel, near Anaheim. She was released on bail from the County Jail last month.

Mrs. Sittel is a former matron of the County Jail, and the convicted murderess was in her care for many months. Her testimony as to the physical condition of the prisoner, at the proceedings for admission to bail, aided materially in inducing Judge Smith to grant the plea. It was claimed that if Miss Williamson remained in the jail, her death would certainly follow within a few weeks, but that if she could have exercise and pure air, she might recover from the heart affection and attendant ills which had become aggravated during her imprisonment.

Exercise has been denied her by her weakened condition. Attorney Kase, who presented her interests in the application for admission to bail, yesterday announced that his client had been confined to the house by illness, and is sinking.

An appeal from the verdict in the Superior Court, and sentence of twenty years in State prison passed upon her by Judge Smith is pending in the Supreme Court.

CUT-OVER LANDS TO BE UTILIZED.

CASH RETURNS EXPECTED FROM GROWING EUCALYPTI.

Blue and Sugar Gum Make First-Class Timber, Which May Be Substituted for Ash and Hickory for Many Purposes—Forest Service Encouraging Planting — Issues Leaflet.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, May 1.—The present interest in the commercial planting of eucalyptus trees has led several large California lumber companies to look into the profits which may be had from planting these trees on cut-over lands in the redwood belt of the northern coast counties, where the moderate climate is most favorable.

Cut-over lands have generally been left waste after lumbering. Though unproductive, these lands still continue to be taxed, and their owners are therefore very eager to make them yield returns in the future. Several species of eucalypti furnish timber of exceptional value, and grow rapidly. Blue gum and sugar gum are adapted to a great variety of conditions and will produce first-class saw timber in from twenty-five to thirty years.

The wood is similar in its qualities to that of the ash and the hickory of the Eastern States and for many purposes may be substituted for them. Blue gum timber, cut from trees twenty or thirty years old and used in wagon manufacture and similar industries in several sections of California where the timber has been grown to suitable dimensions, is giving entire satisfaction.

A study of the growth and utilization of commercial eucalypti planted in California has been made by the forest service in coöperation with the State, and the results show that the commercial planting of eucalypti upon suitable portions of the areas in the redwood belt will be profitable. The stock needed for this planting may be cheaply raised in local nurseries established for this purpose when it is required in large quantities for extensive planting.

Some preparation of the planting sites prior to planting is necessary. The brush and weeds which spring up after the slash fire set to clear the ground after logging, together with the débris left upon the ground, must be removed to make the planting practicable. The method of clearing most extensively used is to run a brush fire over the ground in the fall preceding the planting. When this method is followed, the fire should be kept carefully under control to prevent its escaping beyond the desired limits. After clearing, small eucalyptus seedlings may be planted, at a cost of a few dollars per acre.

The returns from such planting cannot now be closely estimated, since the value of eucalyptus lumber is increasing so rapidly. The forest service is prepared to give assistance to private owners who wish to plant their lands in this way.

He active and must be active, endowed with a divine desire in "footprints in the sands is constantly seeking to the law of activity, or law of and promote the activities of children. With irresistible force children unconsciously form habits of destructive or constructive, useful or bad activities. Manual training in the schools and the home seeks to utilize these inborn powers and direct them into construction or useful channels. The possibilities through this mode of instruction are therefore unlimited. Its theories are as yet unwritten, and its methods undefined. History reveals, however, the experiences of the past, and from these experiences we can deduct principles which guide us. Contemporary history shows signs confirming true deductions from past experiences. For example, Japan's unparalled rise. Undoubtedly the potential factor in Japan's emergence is in its home life, which for ages has included the influences which make for usefulness in the future.

So far as I know no country equals Japan in general art and handcrafts. Japanese impression, impulses and interest are extended over the world upon this basis. She needs no guns to back them up. Japan is flooding this country with her art and craft goods, and the Japanese government is undoubtedly directing this enormous movement so profitable to her people. Japan is impressing herself upon every home of this and other countries. What is the use of passing laws to shut out Japanese? Japan is present. Now why should we buy handcraft products made in Japanese homes, and by Japanese men, women and children, for most of the little goods sold, except porcelain, are home-made craft goods. These products are of artistic and refined taste and of supero finish. A glance at the exhibit at Venice by the sea will confirm these facts. The splendor of the Japanese exhibit in contrast with the crude and vulgar-looking pyrographic articles, such as mugs and poinsettias and a few other specimen of our own craft, brings serious reflectons to one's mind. There is, however, at Venice, a new craft, if not a new industry brought to notice by a lady. This is an American craft, the preparation of ocean kelp for craft products. This is a worthy idea and should be patronized.

School and home industries or crafts have a tremendous influence on home and national life. There is a need for home industries in Los Angeles, and the question is, what can be done to stimulate boys and girls in their efforts and useful activities? Perhaps much of the Japanese activity along this line is due to the fact that there is an almost unlimited market for her goods. Now, if something could be done to create a market for home and school craft products, there is no doubt that our boys and girls would at once manifest a greater desire and ability to do good handwork. A beginning has to be made somewhere, and by someone. In other countries, for example Scandinavia, there are "Sloyd exhibition stores," where children boys and girls, place their school and home-hand products, handwork or craft products for sale. These stores are much patronized and are centers of attraction and large numbers of specimens of various forms of handwork are here exhibited. These stores have existed for a long time, and are now established institutions.

The establishment of a Home and School Craft Store, for children's work, here in Los Angeles, would have a great influence on children's work in school and at home. It would raise the standard of their work. It would pull many dullards to the front. As such a store would be at the same time a permanent exhibition and sale place, it would stimulate the art side, the quality and practical sides of children's work. It would be a commercial avenue into which children could turn their little products to realize some commercial return. These are factors in home, school and child life which no one can belittle or deny. The influence on our handwork in general would be felt, and it would keep many a boy off the street in the evenings.

The working plan of such a store would be somewhat after this fashion: Some influential men and women or clubs or societies would secure the lease of a small, clean store in the central part of the city. A young woman, some one who understands handwork, a manual training teacher, perhaps, would be placed in charge. The store would be self-supporting after a little while, because on every article sold a certain portion, in ratio to its value, perhaps, would be deducted. The store would be under the control of some board elected by some clubs or societies. No large sum of money would be required. A small beginning made would insure success.

Fancy that it became known to the children that they could leave their various handwork made in school and home in a store to be sold. The desire to do better and better would extend throughout the community. Then there is the law prohibiting children's work. This school and home craft store would in a large measure supply a great need, as many children would turn their attention to handwork as a source of income.

PICTURE POSTALS OF SCHOOLS WILL REACH WHOLE COUNTRY.

WHAT a flutter, what a flutter, when the 500,000 picture postal cards start out from the State of California the latter part of this month!

The sometime bothersome and often purposeless picture postals have at last found their high and appropriate mission. They are to be the messengers, 50,000 strong, from the children of California to their friends in the East, inviting them to visit Los Angeles and the State generally during the N.E.A. convention here in July.

From the seniors of the high schools down to the smallest B 1 in the primary grades, the school pupils are making a mental review of the friends who might be persuaded to come to the Golden State this summer, and are submitting to their teachers the results of their estimates.

"Yes, I ordered three picture postals," said one small boy yesterday; "but there's a kid next to me that has asked for ten. He just has scads of friends in the East."

Every teacher reports to the principal how many of these cards can be used by the pupils in her room, and the principal reports to the publicity bureau in the Chamber of Commerce, to Robert O. Hoedel, the man behind the gun at present, who is directing this wonderful campaign of converting the East to a western tour.

All Chambers of Commerce in California and many private hotels have been invited to supply postal cards typical of their communities. They are to be real photographs, and must pass muster as true artistic products, lovely enough, in fact, to induce a stop-over at each particular point. These cards are to be given out to every schoolchild that desires one in the entire State. The children are to write a few words of invitation, telling of the cheap rate, and asking the friends to come.

No postal will be wasted. Superintendent of Schools Moore has arranged for the cards to be written in school as a new and delightful language lesson, thus killing several birds with one stone. The children are so interested that they are already saving pennies for the postage, and several of the Los Angeles schools are to have post boxes in the buildings until the last little messenger has been sent out by kind Uncle Sam.

At headquarters in the Chamber of Commerce every mail brings responses from the schools, stating how many postals they need, and every few minutes a telephone ring announces another local school heard from. The Polytechnic High School will send 3000. Castelar-street School will send 5000. One of the Santa Ana schools asked for the greatest number to be used by any grammar school. Santa Barbara, San Diego and many of the Northern and central California towns have sent in their estimates, and the cards themselves are scheduled to arrive at the bureau headquarters very soon.

This far-reaching postal scheme was originated by two young men of Berkeley, who have charge of the publicity campaign, under the direction of Dr. E. C. Moore, who is chairman of that committee. Eugene Hallett and Robert Hoedel are already well known in Los Angeles, and have the unique distinction of having been editor and business manager, respectively, of the local High School publication, Blue and White. They graduated at Los Angeles High, and still have the warmest affection for the school where their names have been handed down to each succeeding class as the originators of Blue and White.

These young men, with the aid of Dr. Moore, have laid other plans for tapping the entire United States with their lines of intelligence about the convention of educators in July. Every State superintendent, county superintendent and high school principal in the United States has been written to and asked to send word how much of the literature concerning the convention can be used by them. This literature is being forwarded rapidly, so there will hardly be a corner of the United States untouched by the California fever.

The two chiefs of the N. E. A. Pubulicty Bureau, originators of the postal card idea to invite half a million people to California.

ALL RECORDS ARE BROKEN.

Thirteen Hundred Visitors Register at Chamber of Commerce in Week. Many Foreigners.

The attendance at the free exhibit of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce during the past week has broken all records. Between Monday and Saturday 1300 names were placed on the register, but as only a small proportion of the visitors sign it is impossible to know the total number who saw the exhibit.

Nearly every country of the civilized globe is represented by the visitors, but the greater number appear to have been Shriners who came here for the conclave. The majority of the visitors are registered from the States of the Middle West.

EXERCISE FOR TIRED WOMEN.

HOW TO START HEALTHY FLOW OF BLOOD TO THE SPINE.

The Weak Back Causes a Feeling of Lassitude and Disposition to Lie Down and Rest—A Simple Exercise That Will Help to Alleviate Such a Condition.

The weak or tired back in mother or daughter is usually caused by one of two things—lack of exercise for the muscles which support the spine, or an improper condition of the liver and kidneys, says Mme. Carroll in The Mother's Magazine. You see, I always hark back to the cleansing organs of the body, because no disease ever started from without the human system; it always starts from within. The worst contagious disease there ever was can be faced with safety by a person clean and pure within.

Disease never attaches itself to a healthful organism. It can thrive only on an impurity. Therefore, cultivate the liver and kidneys.

The back which is weak from lack of muscular strength expresses itself in lassitude—a tendency to lie down and be indolent. The back that pains from irregularities in the liver and kidneys finds its reflection in extreme nervousness, shooting pains difficulty in bending over, inability to lift objects.

One of the simple exercises physical culture provides for inducing shoulders to be square and to strengthen the back, is taken from the Japanese jiujitsu. Mother and daughter, mother and son, or husband and wife, can practice together.

Let two persons stand erect, facing each other, and place the palms of their hands together. Let each press with all the strength possible against the palms of the other, throwing the shoulders back and holding them up.

Keep pressing until one or the other gives way, then rest, and repeat until the exercise has been taken for ten or fifteen minutes. An addition to this exercise is for both to raise the palms when pressing as high above the head as possible, and then lower to the line of the hips. Then bring them up nearly level with the shoulders, all the time resisting the effort of the opponent to overcome the pressure.

The immediate effect of this exercise is felt in the wrists and arms, but passes from them, as the circulation is quickened, to the shoulder muscles and thence to the spinal cord. A flow of healthy blood is started towards, and not from, the spine; the spine is really fed with new blood, and when the exercise is taken two or three times a day its helpfulness in strengthening the back will be noticed within a week.

During this exercise the spine is rigid. It takes on a new position, and is compelled to exert itself. In doing this it calls for more nourishment than it ordinarily gets; and through this the weak parts are stimulated and helped. From the spine this excitement, somewhat lessened, passes to the liver and kidneys, with beneficial results. The Japanese, who pride themselves on the healthfulness of their young girls, make this exercise, with all its simplicity, a necessity in every day's training.

However, despite its simplicity, the exercise, when practiced as I have directed, will tax every muscle and put the body in a fine glow, reaching especially the spine and its cord.

CHINESE BOY AND OPIUM.

Lee John, a dried-up little Chinese, was caught in the act of trying to pass cooked opium to a chain gang prisoner yesterday afternoon. He made a desperate effort to escape and was captured after a three-block chase by a plain-clothes patrolman. The attempt to pass the drug was made as the prisoners were leaving the wagons in front of the Central Station. Apparently the Chinese did not realize the extent of his offense, for he made the attempt openly. He was placed in jail.

LOW-GRADE ORANGES FORCE MARKET DOWN.

THE orange market has been declining for the past two weeks and at this time is lower than it was a week ago. Really high-class fruit still brings fine prices, but the great preponderance of the fruit offered is below grade or badly effected with decay.

This decay is due to the ripe fruit having to stand in the packing-house awaiting cars or from being sidetracked after loading awaiting motive power. Another factor is the long time taken in delivering the fruit to points of destination.

Large sizes are also still a detriment to high prices and the trade is not disposed to push them as much as formerly and unless prices on this end are reduced on this class of goods the eastern retailer threatens to neglect the orange business altogether in favor of other kinds of fruit.

Shipments have not been quite as heavy during the last week as for the week previous, but were still in excess of the corresponding weeks of 1905 and 1906. At the present rate of increase it will not take longer than this month to overtake the figures of last year.

We are now about 600 cars of oranges and 200 cars of lemons behind last year's output. For the past seven days there were shipped about 1000 cars of oranges and 100 cars of lemons, making about 1100 cars for the week.

During the same period in 1905 there were shipped 900 cars and in 1906, 825 cars.

During the last five days there has been sold at the different auctions, 420 cars of oranges and four cars of lemons. Of these New York City handled 182 cars, Boston 83 cars, Philadelphia 61 cars, Pittsburgh 40 cars, Cleveland 23 cars, St. Louis 23 cars and Cincinnati 12 cars.

There is a considerable amount of uncertainty in the lemon market. At last Tuesday's foreign auction sale, prices eased off upward of $1 per box on the 360s and second grade fruit of all sizes. Fancy 200s held their own without a break.

High grade Californias have not yet felt the effect of the break in prices, but unless warm weather comes very soon there will no doubt be a slight drop.

However, the prospects for a good summer season are the best and many expect that they will exceed the phenominal figures of last year, when some special brands sold for over $3000 a car.

BADGERS AND BOOKS.

City Librarian Talks About the Public Library and Tells Story to Fit the Badgers.

"Books, Business and Badgers," was the title upon which City Librarian Lummis yesterday spoke to the City Club. The "badgers" of course, are his back-biters, and he paid his respects to them in a very indirect way, just by telling a little story.

When Lummis came to California, he chose the original way—he walked. One night while sleeping on the ground in Western Kansas, he heard a great noise.

"I didn't want to be taken unawares," said Mr. Lummis, "so I got up to look around; I was sure it was the noise of a thousand prairie wolves. At last, away off, outlined against the dark sky, on the top of a Kansas mountain about the size of a large ant-hill, I saw a single coyote, and he was making all that noise."

In his prefatory remarks, concerning the making and the mission of books, there was irony in the following brief sentence:

"There are people in the world who look on a book as a means of improving the mind."

He stated that the largest library in the United States—that of Boston—is ninth largest in the world, and Los Angeles is fourteenth.

"This city," he continued, "is paying $80,000 a year for its public library, and it is not simply to supply children with storybooks which their parents should buy, nor to supply books for men and women to use to kill time. The Los Angeles Public Library circulates more books, per capita, than any other library in America, and I think it is worth something better than killing time."

The librarian said he was pleased to notice boys coming to the library to see if they could find books to tell about house-painting; carpenters to learn about architecture, and mechanics to see if they can find anything about reinforced concrete, but," he continued, "we also want the professional and business men. It is a workshop, a great educational gallery, and if I can't make the public believe this, then I fail."

He said there are two things he always tells those who are seeking to prepare themselves for library attendants; first, that the library belongs to the public, and not to the librarian nor the attendant; second, that a book is a part of a human life, and must not be thrown around.

He also referred to the disposition of some people to find fault with the library, and said that all efforts to get a suitable building on the finest site any city could have for a library, or to secure the meeting of the American Library Association, would fail, so long as bickerings of this kind are kept up.

AGAIN WE SAY

Steel Shares Are the Shares to Buy

if you want the sort of an investment the Bessemer converter has produced, through the companies first operating with that process of making steel, viz., $200,000 for every $100 invested at the start of that great invention.

And we are borne out in this by leading steel men of the country, who are a unit in declaring the new Wills process is the greatest improvement in the steel industry since the invention of the Bessemer process many years ago.

The Wills invention is the new process which does away cost of all machinery and big priced labor now necessary to roll steel into the desired forms.

This remarkable invention will revolutionize the steel the linotype machine did printing. Every steel magnate this, and also concedes that the Wills process will be every steel plant to compete for business. Four times, talists have offered vast sums for the patents covering but the Delaware & Lackawanna Steel Company will control of these patents.

By the Wills process steel is cast direct into the converter, thus giving perfect castings without flaws of common in ordinary castings, a thing always striven for accomplished with such satisfactory results. The quality thus vastly improved, the cost of manufacturing is and time, labor and the cost of expensive machinery By this method steel can be made as hard or soft as desired.

From this you can see the importance of an investment Delaware & Lackawanna Steel Company.

This stock is all common—there are no preferred shares—and participates in all earnings of the share is full paid and non-assessable. The first allotment offered at $1 was quickly taken up and

and only a very limited number of shares remaining at this price. The remarkable demand for shares $1) is pretty good evidence of the company's status in the public mind, it being apparent to all steel everybody else—that this is the most important and for you that has occurred in years. From an investor's standpoint it can only be classed with Bell Telephone Sewing Machine, Westinghouse Airbrake, the Bessemer converter, and the linotype machine. The very low for so great a proposition—only $200,000.

The Next Advance Will Be to $2 a Share--Buy Now Share in This and All Other Increases, of Which There Will Be Many

Exceptional Investment And Why

Delaware & Lackawanna Steel shares stand unrivaled as an investment. The conservative investor must admit this after investigation. Not the slightest risk—no possible escape from wealth, which must inevitably follow the introduction of steel made by this new method.

The Wills process will revolutionize the steel business, reduce the cost, make better steel, and yet increase the profits. At a conservative estimate the company can earn a dividend of from 40 to 75 per cent. the first year alone, which will send the price soaring to $8 or $10 a share. After that it will go to what enormous figure, no one knows!

Investors Rushing In And Why

A great many shrewd investors in Los Angeles California, as well as those in other cities is being offered, have been prompt and their opportunity of the first offering of great many more have gotten in at the realize that the Delaware & Lackawanna the biggest thing since the Bell Telephone converter, and nearly every one of those first price have returned and gotten in of shares at $1.25.

They are not standing idly by waiting to happen. The shares are now 25 cents were at the start, and in a few days $2.00, and away above that figure before older.

The company's works, consisting of an enormous steel plant, machine shops, iron foundry, covering 4½ acres of ground, almost in the shadow of New York City, Brooklyn and Jersey City, of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad, have been thoroughly overhauled and are blowing of steel.

Six immense $20,000 steel converters, each with a capacity of 60,000 pounds of steel daily, pouring steel, and then will come the profits, and such profits!

The men back of this company are bankers and old-time steel men, with years of experience world, which assured the success of the enterprise from the start.

FAIR MARGARET CASTELL

BY H. RIDER HAGGARD. FOR READERS of the SUNDAY TIMES.

"It is clear that they have a blood-feud against you on account of that Scotchman whom you killed in self-defense," he said, anxiously. "Also, these Spaniards are very revengeful, nor have they forgiven you for calling the English to your aid against them. Peter, I fear that if you go abroad they will murder you."

"Well, I cannot stay indoors always, like a rat in a drain," said Peter, crossly, "so what is to be done? Appeal to the law?"

"No; for you have just broken the law by killing a man. I think you had best go away for a while till this storm blows over."

"Go away! Peter go away?" broke in Margaret, dismayed.

"Yes," answered her father. "Listen, daughter. You cannot be married at once. It is not seemly; moreover, notice must be given and arrangements made. A month hence will be soon enough, and that is not long for you to wait, who only became affianced yesterday. Also, until you are married, no word must be said to any one of this betrothal of yours, lest those Spaniards should lay their feud at your door, also, and work you some mischief. Let none know of it, I charge you, and in company be distant to each other, as though there were nothing between you."

"As you will, sir," replied Peter, "but for my part I do not like all these hidings of the truth, which ever lead to future trouble. I say, let me bide here and take my chance, and let us be wed as soon as may be."

"That your wife may be made a widow before the week is out, or the house be burnt about our ears by those rascals and their following? No, no, Peter; walk softly that you may walk safely. We will hear the report of the Spaniard d'Aguilar, and afterward take counsel."

CHAPTER VI.

FAREWELL.

D'Aguilar came to supper that night, as he had promised, and this time not on foot and unattended, but with pomp and circumstance, as befitted a great lord. First appeared two running footmen to clear the way; then followed d'Aguilar, mounted on a fine white horse, and splendidly appareled in a velvet cloak and a hat with nodding ostrich plumes, while after him rode four men-at-arms in his livery.

"We asked one guest, or rather, he asked himself, and we have got seven, to say nothing of these horses," grumbled Castell, watching their approach from an upper window. "Well, we must make the best of it. Peter, go see that man and beast are fed, and fully, that they may not grumble at our hospitality. The guard can eat in the little hall with our own folk. Margaret, put on your richest robe and your jewels, those which you wore when I took you up to that city feast last summer. We will show these fine foreign birds that we London merchants have brave feathers, also."

Peter hesitated, misdoubting him of the wisdom of this display, who, if he could have had his will, would have sent the Spaniard's following to the tavern, and received him in sober garments to a simple meal.

But Castell, who seemed somewhat disturbed that night, who loved, moreover, to show his wealth at times, after the fashion of a Jew, began to fume and ask if he must go himself. So the end of it was that Peter went, shaking his head, while, urged to it by her father, Margaret departed, also, to array herself.

A few minutes later Castell, in his costliest feast-day robe, greeted d'Aguilar in the ante-hall, and, the two of them being alone, asked him how matters went as regarded De Ayala and the man who had been killed.

"Well and ill," answered d'Aguilar. "Doctor de Puebla, with whom I hoped to deal, has left London in a huff, for he says that there is not room enough for two Spanish Ambassadors at court, so I had to fall back upon De Ayala, after all. Indeed, twice have I seen that exalted priest upon the subject of the well-deserved death of his villainous servant, and, after much difficulty, for having lost several men in such brawls, he thought his honor touched, to look the fifty gold angels—to be transmitted to the fellow's family, of course, or so he said—and gave a receipt. Here it is," and he handed a paper to Castell, who read it carefully.

It was to the effect that Peter Brome, having paid a sum of fifty angels to the relatives of Andrew Pherson, a servant of the Spanish Ambassador, which Andrew the said Peter had killed in a brawl, the said Ambassador undertook not to prosecute or otherwise molest the said Peter on account of the manslaughter which he had committed.

"But no money has been paid," said Castell.

"Indeed, yes, I paid it. De Ayala gives no receipts against promises."

"I thank you for your courtesy, señor. You shall have the gold before you leave this house. Few would have trusted a stranger thus far."

D'Aguilar waved his hand.

"Make no mention of such a trifle. I would ask you to accept it as a token of my regard for your family, only that would be an affront to so wealthy a man. But listen, I have more to say. You are, or, rather, your kinsman, Peter, is still in the wood. De Ayala has pardoned him; but there remains the King of England, whose law he has broken. Well, this day I have seen the King, who, by the way, talked of you as a worthy man, saying that he had always thought only a Jew could be so wealthy, and that he knew you were not, since you had reported to him as a good son of the church," and he paused, looking at Castell.

"I fear His Grace magnifies my wealth, which is but small," answered Castell, coolly, leaving the rest of his speech unnoticed. "But what said His Grace?"

"I showed him De Ayala's receipt, and he answered that if His Excellency was satisfied, was he satisfied, and for his part would not order any process to issue; but he bade me tell you and Peter Brome that if he caused more tumult in his streets, whatever the provocation, and especially if that tumult were between English and Spaniards, he would hang him at once, with trial or without it. All of which he said very angrily, for the last thing which His Highness desires just now is any trouble between Spain and England."

"That is bad," answered Castell, "for this very morning there was near to being a tumult," and he told the story of how the two Spaniards had waylaid Peter, and one of them had been knocked down by the serving man with a stone.

At this news d'Aguilar shook his head.

"Then that is just where the trouble lies," he excaimed. "I know it from my people, who keep me well informed, that all those servants of De Ayala, and there are more than twenty of them, have sworn an oath by the Virgin of Seville that before they leave this land they will have your kinsman's blood in payment for that of Andrew Pherson, who, although a Scotchman, was their officer, and a brave man, whom they loved much. Now, if they attack him, as they will, there must be a brawl, for Peter fights well, and, if there is a brawl, though Peter and the English get the best of it, as very likely the mmay, Peter will certainly be hanged, for so the King has promised."

"Before they leave the land? When do they leave it?"

"De Ayala sails within a month, and his folk with him, for his co-Ambassador, the Dr. de Puebla, will bear with him no more, and has written from the country house where he is sulking that one of them must go."

"Then I think it best, señor, that Peter should travel for a month."

"Friend Castell, you are wise; I think so, too, and, I counsel you, arrange it at once. Hush! Here comes the lady, your daughter.

As he spoke, Margaret appeared, descending the broad oak stairs, which led into the ante-room. Holding a lamp in her hand, she was in full light, whereas the two men stood in the shadow. She wore a low-cut dress of crimson velvet, embroidered about the bodice with dead gold, which enhanced the dazzling whiteness of her shapely neck and bosom. Round her throat hung a string of great pearls, and on her head was a net of gold, studded with smaller pearls, from beneath which her glorious, chestnut-black hair flowed down in rippling waves almost to her knees. Having her father's bidding so to do, she had adorned herself thus that she might look her fairest, not in the eyes of their guest, but in those of her new-affianced husband. So fair was she seen thus that d'Aguilar, the artist, the adorer of loveliness, caught his breath and shivered at the sight of her.

"By the eleven thousand virgins!" he said, "your daughter is more beautiful than all of them put together. She should be crowned a queen, and bewitch the world."

"Nay, nay, Señor," answered Castell, hurriedly. "Let her remain humble and honest, and bewitch her husband."

"So I should say if I were the husband," he muttered, then stepped forward, bowing, to meet her.

"Now, the li[illegible] of the silver lamp she held on hi[illegible]owed over the two of them, d'Aguilar and Margaret, and certainly they seemed a well-matched pair. Both were tall and cast by nature in a rich and splendid mold; both had that high air of breeding which comes with ancient blood—for what bloods are more ancient than those of the Jew and the Eastern?—both were slow and stately of movement, low-voiced and dignified of speech. Castell noted it and was afraid, he knew not of what.

Peter, entering the room by another door, clad only in his gray clothes, for he would not put on gay garments for the Spaniard, noted it, also, and, with the quick instinct of love, knew this magnificent foreigner for a rival and an enemy. But he was not afraid, only jealous and angry. Indeed, nothing would have pleased him better then than that the Spaniard should have struck him in the face, so that within five minutes it might be shown which of them was the better man. It must come to this, he felt, and very glad would he have been if it could come at the beginning, and not at the end, so that one of the other of them might be saved much trouble. Then he remembered that he had promised to say or show nothing of how things stood between him and Margaret, and, coming forward, he greeted d'Aguilar quietly but coldly, telling him that his horses had been stabled and his retinue accommodated.

The Spaniard thanked him heartily enough, and they passed in to supper. It was a strange meal for all four of them, yet outwardly pleasant enough. Forgetting his cares, Castell drank gaily, and began to talk of the many changes which he had seen in his life, and of the rise and fall of kings. D'Aguilar talked, also, of the Spanish wars and policy, for in the one he had seen much service, and of the other he knew every turn. It was easy to see that he was one of those who mixed with courts, and had the ear of ministers and majesties. Margaret, also, being keen-witted and anxious to learn of the great world that lay beyond, seeking to know, among other things, what were the true characters of Ferdinand, King of Aragon, and Isabella, his wife, the famous Queen.

"I will tell you in a few words, señorita. Ferdinand is the most ambitious man in Europe, false, also, if it serves his purpose. He lives for self and gain—that is, money and power. These are his gods, [illegible] he has not true religion. He is not [illegible]ever, but, being very cunning, he will succeed and leave a famous name behind him."

"An ugly picture," said Margaret. "And what of his Queen?"

"She," answered d'Aguilar, "is a great woman, who knows how to use the temper of her time and so attain her ends. To the world she shows a tender heart, but beneath it lies hid an iron resolution."

"What are those ends?" asked Margaret, again.

"To bring all Spain under her rule; utterly to crush the Moors and take their territories; to make the Church of Christ triumphant upon earth; to stamp out heresy; to convert or destroy the Jews," he added, slowly, and as he spoke the words, Peter, watching, saw his eyes open and glitter like a snake's—"to bring their bodies to the purifying flames, and their vast wealth into her treasury, and thus earn the praise of the faithful upon earth, and for herself a throne in heaven."

For a while there was silence after this speech, then Margaret said, boldly:

"If heavenly thrones are built of human blood and tears, what stone and mortar do they use in hell, I wonder?" Then, without pausing for an answer, she rose, saying that she was weary, courtseyed to d'Aguilar, her father and Peter, each in turn, and left the hall.

"Friend Castell, you will repeat my news to your good kinsman, here. I pray, for all your sakes, that he may bow his head to what cannot be helped and thus keep it safe upon his shoulders."

"What meant the man?" asked Peter, when the sound of the horses' hoofs had died away.

Castell told him of what had passed between him and d'Aguilar before supper, and showed him De Ayala's receipt, adding, in a vexed voice:

"I have forgotten to repay him the gold; it shall be sent tomorrow."

"Have no fear; he will come for it," answered Peter, coldly. "Now, if I have my way, I will take the risk of these Spaniards' swords and King Henry's rope, and bide here."

"That you must not do," said Castell, earnestly, "for my sake and Margaret's, if not for yours. Would you make her a widow before she's a wife? Listen: It is my wish that you travel down to Essex to take delivery of your father's land, in the Vale of Dedham, and see to the repairing of the mansion house, which, I am told, needs it much. Then, when these Spaniards are gone, you can return and at once be married, say, one short month hence."

"Will not you and Margaret come with me to Dedham?"

Castell shook his head.

"It is impossible. I must wind up my affairs, and Margaret cannot go with you alone. Moreover, there is no place for her to lodge. I will keep her here till your return."

"Yes, sir; but will you keep her safe? The cozening words of Spaniards are sometimes more deadly than their swords."

"I think that Margaret has a medicine against all such arts," answered her father, with a little smile, and then left him.

On the morrow, when Castell told Margaret that her lover must leave her for a while that night—for this Peter would not do himself—she prayed him, even with tears, that he would not send him so far from her, or that they might all go togther. But he reasoned with her kindly, showing her that the latter was impossible, and that if Peter did not go at once it was probable that Peter would soon be dead, whereas, if he went, there would be but one short month of waiting till the Spaniards had sailed, after which they might be married and live in peace and safety.

So she came to see that this way was best and wisest, and gave way; but, oh! heavy were those hours, and sore was their parting. Essex was no far journey, and to enter into lands which only two days before Peter believed he had lost forever, no sad errand, while the promise that at the end of a single month he should return to claim his bride hung before them like a star. Yet they were sad-hearted, both of them, and that star seemed very far away.

Margaret was afraid lest Peter might be waylaid upon the road, but he laughed at her, saying that her father was sending six stout men with him as an escort, and thus companioned, he feared no Spaniards. Peter, for his part, was afraid lest d'Aguilar might make love to her while he was away. But she laughed at him, saying that all her heart was his, and that she had none to give to d'Aguilar or any other man. Moreover, that England was a free land, in which women, who were no king's wards, could not be led whither they did not wish to go. So it seemed that they had naught to fear, save the daily chance of life and death. And yet they were afraid.

"Dear love," said Margaret to him, after she had thought a while, "our road looks straight and easy, and yet there may be pitfalls in it that we cannot guess. Therefore, you shall swear one thing to me: That, whatever you shall hear or whatever may happen, you will never doubt me, as I shall never doubt you. If, for instance, you should be told that I have discarded you, and given myself to some other husband; even if you should believe that you see such a thing signed by my hand, or if you think that you hear it told to you by my voice—still, I say, believe it not."

"How could such a thing be?" asked Peter, anxiously.

"I do not suppose it could be; I only paint the worst that might happen, as a lesson for us both. Heretofore my life has been calm as a summer's day; but who knows when winter storms may rise, and often I have thought that I was born to know wind and rain and lightning as well as peace and sunshine. Remember, that my father is a Jew, and that to the Jews and their children terrible things chance at times. Why, all this wealth might vanish in an hour, and you might find me in a prison, or clad in rags begging my bread. Now do you swear?" and she held toward him the gold crucifix that hung upon her bosom.

"Aye," he said. "I swear it by this token and by your holy lips," and he kissed first the cross and then her mouth, adding: "Shall I ask the same oath of you?"

She laughed.

"If you will; but it is not needful. Peter, I think that I know you too well; I think that your heart will never stir, even if I be dead and you married to another. And yet, men are men, and women have wiles, so I will swear this: That should you slip, perchance, and I live to learn it, I will try not to judge you harshly." And again she laughed, she who was so certain of her empire over this man's heart and body.

"Thank you," said Peter, "but for my part I will try to stand straight upon my feet, so, should any tales be brought to you of me, sift them well, I pray you."

Then, forgetting their doubts and dreads, they talked of their marriage, which they fixed for that day month, and of how they would live happily in Dedham Vale. Also Margaret, who well knew the house, named the Old Hall, where they should live, for she had stayed there as a child, gave him many commands as to the new arrangement of its chambers and its furnishing, which, as there was money and to spare, could be as costly as they willed, saying that she would send him down all things by wain so soon as he was ready for them.

Thus, then, the hours wore away, until at length night came, and they took their last meal together, the three of them, for it was arranged that Peter should start at moonrise, when none were about to see him go. It was not a very happy meal, and, though they made a brave show of eating, but little food passed their lips. Now the horses were ready, and Margaret buckled on Peter's sword and threw his cloak about his shoulders, and he, having shaken Castell by the hand and bade him guard their jewel safely, without words kissed her farewell and went.

Taking the silver lamp in her hand, she followed him to the ante-room. At the door he turned and saw her standing there gazing after him with wide eyes and a strained, white face. At the sight of her silent pain almost his heart failed him, almost he refused to go. Then he remembered, and went.

For a while Margaret still stood thus, until the sound of the horses' hoofs died away, indeed. Then she turned and said:

"Father, I know not how it is, but it seems to me that when Peter and I meet again it will be far off, yes, far off upon the stormy sea—but what sea I know not." And without waiting for an answer she climbed the stairs to her chamber, and there wept herself to sleep.

Castell watched her depart, then muttered to himself:

"God grant she is not foresighted like so many of our race; and yet, why is my own heart so heavy? Well, according to my judgment, I have done my best for him and her, and for myself I care nothing."

CHAPTER VII.

NEWS FROM SPAIN.

Peter Brome was a very quiet man, whose voice was not often heard about the place, and yet it was strange how dull and different the big old house in Holborn seemed without him. Even the handsome Betty, with whom he was never on the best of terms, since there was much about her of which he disapproved, missed him, and said so to her cousin, who only answered with a sigh. For in the bottom of her heart Betty both feared and respected Peter. The fear was of his observant eyes and caustic words, which she knew were always words of truth, and the respect for the general uprightness of his character, especially when her own sex was concerned.

In fact, as has been hinted, two years or so before, when Peter first came to live with the Castells, Betty, thinking him a proper man of gentle birth, such a one, indeed, as she would wish to marry, had made advances to him, which, as he did not seem to notice them, became, by degrees, more and more marked. What happened at last they two knew alone, but it was something that caused Betty to become very angry, and to speak of Peter to his friends as a cold-blooded lout who thought only of work and gain. The episode was passing, and soon forgotten by the lady in the press of other affairs; but the respect remained. Moreover, on one or two occasions, when love of admiration had led her into griefs, Peter had proved a good friend, and, what was better, a friend who did not talk. Therefore, she wished him back again, especially now, when something more than mere vanity and desire for excitement had taken hold of her, and Betty found herself being swept off her feet into very deep and doubtful waters.

The shopmen and the servants missed him, also, for to him all disputes were brought for settlement, for, provided it were not through a lack of honesty, were any pains not too great for him to take to help them in a trouble. Most of all, Castell missed him, since until Peter had gone he did not know how much he had learned to rely upon him, both in his business and as a friend. As for Margaret, her life without him was one long, empty night.

Thus it came about that in such a house any change was welcome, and, though she liked him little enough, Margaret was not even displeased when, one morning, Betty told her that the Lord d'Aguilar was coming to call on her that day, and purposed to bring her a present.

"I do not seek his presents," said Margaret, indifferently; then added: "How do you know that, Betty?"

The young woman colored and tossed her head as she answered:

"I know it, cousin, because, as I was going to visit my old aunt yesterday, who lives on the wharf at Westminster, I met him riding, and he called this out to me, saying that he had a present for you and one for me, also."

"Be careful you do not meet him too often, Betty, when you chance to be visiting your aunt. These Spaniards are not always over honest, as you may learn, to your sorrow."

"I thank you for your good counsel," said Betty, shortly, "but I, who am older than you, know enough of men to be able to guard myself, and can keep them at a distance if they be not honest."

"I am glad of it, Betty, only sometimes I have thought that the distance was scarcely wide enough," answered Margaret, and left the subject, for she was thinking of other things.

That afternoon, when Margaret was walking in the garden, Betty, whose face seemed somewhat flushed, ran up to her and said that the Lord d'Aguilar was waiting in the hall.

"Very good," answered Margaret, "I will come. Go, tell my father, that he may join us. But why are you so disturbed and hurried?" she added, wonderingly.

"Oh," answered Betty, "he has brought me a present, so fine a present—a mantle of the most wonderful lace that ever I saw, and a comb of mottled shell, mounted in gold, to keep it off the hair. He made me wait while he showed me how to put it on, and that was why I ran."

Margaret did not quite see the connection; but she answered, slowly:

"Perhaps it would have been wiser if you had run first. I do not understand why this fine lord brings you presents."

"But he has brought one for you, also, cousin, although he would not say what it was."

"That I understand still less. Go, tell my father that the Señor d'Aguilar awaits him."

Then she went into the hall, and found d'Aguilar looking at an illuminated Book of Hours in which she had been reading, that was written in Spanish in one column and in Latin in that opposite to it. He greeted her in his usual graceful way, that, where Margaret was concerned, was easy and well bred, without being bold, and said at once:

"So you read Spanish, señorita?"

"A little. Not very well, I fear."

"And Latin, also?"

"A little, again. I have been taught that tongue. By studying them thus I try to improve myself in both."

"I perceive that you are learned as you are beautiful," and he bowed, courteously.

"I thank you, señor, but I lay claim to neither grace."

"What need is there to claim that which is evident," replied d'Aguilar; then added: "But I forgot; I have brought you a present, if you will be pleased to accept it. Or, rather, I bring you what is your own, or, at the least, your father's: I bargained with His Excellency, Don De Ayala, pointing out that fifty gold angels was too much to pay for that dead rogue of his; but he would give me nothing back in money, since with gold he never parts. Yet I won some change from him, and it stands without your door. It is a Spanish jennet of the true Moorish blood, which, hundreds of years ago, that people brought with them from the East. He needs it no longer, as he soon returns to Spain, and it is trained to bear a lady."

Margaret did not know what to answer, but, fortunately, at that moment her father appeared, and to him d'Aguilar repeated his tale, adding that he had heard his daughter say that the horse she rode had fallen with her, so that she could use it no more.

Now, Castell did not wish to accept this gift, for such he felt it to be; but d'Aguilar assured him that if he did not he must sell it and return him the price in money, as it did not belong to him. So, there being no help for it, he thanked him in his daughter's name and his own, and they went into the stable yard, whither it had been taken, to look at this horse.

The moment that Castell saw it he knew that it was a creature of great value, pure white in color, with a long, low body, small head, gentle eyes, round hoofs, and flowing mane and tail, such a horse, indeed, as a queen might have ridden. Now, again, he was confused, being sure that this beast had never been given back as a luck-penny, since it would have fetched more than the fifty angels on the market; moreover, he was harnessed with a woman's saddle and bridle of the most beautifully worked red Cordova leather, to which were attached a silver bit and stirrup. But d'Aguilar smiled, and vowed that things were as he told them, so there was nothing more to be said. Margaret, too, was so pleased with the mare, which she longed to ride, that she forgot her scruples, and tried to believe that this was so. Noting her delight, which she could not conceal as she patted the beautiful beast, d'Aguilar said:

"Now, I will ask one thing in return for the bargain that I have made—that I may see you mount this horse for the first time. You told me that you and your father were wont to go out together in the morning. Have I your leave, sir," and he turned to Castell, "to ride with you before breakfast, say, at 7 of the clock, for I would show the lady, your daughter, how she should manage a horse of this blood, which is something of a trick?"

"If you will," answered Castell—"that is, if the weather is fine," for the offer was made so courteously that it could scarcely be refused.

D'Aguilar bowed, and they reentered the house, talking of other matters. When they were in the hall again, he asked whether their kinsman, Peter, had reached his destination safely, adding:

"I pray you, do not tell me where it is, for I wish to be able to put my hand upon my heart and swear to all concerned, and especially to certain fellows who are still seeking for him, that I know nothing of his hiding place."

(To be continued next Sunday.)

"By the eleven thousand virgins!" he said, "Your daughter is more beautiful than all of them put together. She should be crowned a queen, and bewitch the world."

Red Roses and White.

Love I bring you red roses tonight,
  For the heart of love quickened is red.
Though the rose of your favor is white
You must wear my red roses tonight,
  For white is the rose of my dead.

In my heart that you hold in your keeping,
  Sad memory sits at the door
Of a cell where my first love is sleeping
  In thoughts of the roses she wore.
It is long since the day I beheld her
  Ah! many the years that have sped,
Since a child in the arms of an elder,
  I looked on this love that is dead.
'Twas my father, her lord and her lover,
  Who mourned his sweet lady at rest;
But I smiled as he held me above her
  And touched the white rose on her breast.
O! my love, yield a place for this other;
  And deep in my heart evermore
Let me cherish the love of my mother
  In thoughts of the roses she wore.

So the roses I bring you tonight,
  O! my heart's living tenant, are red.
Though the rose of your favor is white
You must wear my red roses tonight,
  For white is the rose of my dead.

The Times gives the views who have communi this paper on the question wrecks. The first is that railroad conductor of over experience, who was His ideas are cer of consideration from man, trainman, dis higher official alike, as general public and by of The Times.]

is frequently made in railroad wrecks in engineer for it all. As a but when it is a question by orders, the conductor and oftentimes more, to primary duty is the safe the train. Tickets are a consideration in cases like Santa Fé overland's col the case there were sev to blame.

whether there is really the duties of the have worked the heav handling the without any I was to be busy with orders to remember, them around my keep them con This is easy, tickets and kept mind all the time. that is needed is and that the con cooperate on which conductors hired men; here the does that. A has no business incompetent man, competent, it is with him.

Put the matter right before the officials and he will be taken off, if you insist.

"A conductor should make his brakemen, especially the head man, assistants in all his work. Under no consideration should a train move until they have read and thoroughly understand the orders. They must be instructed to be constantly on the lookout and ready to give warning if there is any sign of the engineer passing a meeting point. A good way is to impress upon them that they must expect to run a train themselves some day and they must coöperate and learn their work. Too many conductors do not do this.

"For a train to leave the depot with the brakeman knowing nothing of orders, the conductor taking tickets and the engineer busy with the many details of starting, when a train is coming in, is to invite disaster.

"The greatest need of railroads is better discipline. There should be stricter laws governing railroad men. In Canada, when there is an accident someone is going to suffer for it. Childish excuses do not go there. Inspectors are needed, and, while railroad managers may not feel pleased with it, the government should take a hand, for there is no authority like that for enforcing laws strictly. That is what is needed, and needed badly. At present there is no law that seems to cover even the worst cases of negligence. I doubt, of course, whether railroad officials or trainmen would like the idea of government intervention, but I believe it is needed.

"A conductor must remember that he is the captain of the train and on him must fall the responsibility for accidents resulting from forgetfulness and poor discipline. There are too many who do not seem to realize their responsibilities."

NOT COMPLICATED MATTER.

[The second expression on the subject is a communication from a railroad man who signs himself "Old-timer" and who deals with both the Santa Fé and Colton wrecks. Since the discharge of the Santa Fé trainmen on preliminary examination, the switchmen at Colton have also been discharged.]

"The cause of the fatal disaster on the Santa Fé is not, from a railroader's point of view, such a complicated matter as the press and the coroner's jury seem to make it appear.

"When receiving the order at La Grande Station from the operator, it was the conductor's duty, if he was not familiar with the place designated on the orders, to make inquiries and find out before he accepted or signed for the same. He should have read it aloud to the engineer, giving him a copy of the same; then it was his duty to hand the order to at least one of his brakemen for his information. It was the engineer's duty to understand the text of the order and konw where the meeting point was, and to hand the same to his fireman. On arriving at meeting point's whistling post, it was the engineer's duty to whistle for the same as at any other station. Conductor should have called engineer's attention to meeting point by special, giving bell-cord whistle signals, as per company rules. If these instructions had been lived up to, the fatal accident would not have occurred.

"The Espee's fatal accident at Colton was caused by the switch crew leaving a switch open. The foreman of this crew should have either closed the switch for the main line or left a responsible man at that point to protect it. The theory that No. 9 was not properly reported has nothing to do with the matter. If No. 9 had passed, how were the yard men to know but what there was a special passenger train on the line close behind? It is a well-known rule among all railroad employés that no main-line switches are to be left open without a responsible man to protect.

"As will be readily seen, that so far as rules and regulations are concerned, neither the Santa Fé nor the Espee is to blame for the accidents caused by the fault of employés. They will no doubt be placed in a position to bear the costs of suits and claims on account of carelessness and neglect of employés."

ANIMALS AND POISON.

THE HEDGEHOG CAN EAT OPIUM WITHOUT INJURY.

Monkeys Will Thrive on Strychnine and Rats Are Immune to Digitalin, While Chickens Are Unaffected by Oxalic Acid and Goats Eat Poison Hemlock.

[Baltimore Sun:] Poison is surely one of the most weird of nature's bizarre contrivances. A tiny speck of an innocent-looking white powder on the tip of the tongue means instant death if that powder happens to be the deadly drug aconitine. A moment's whiff of unseen vapor, and if that vapor rises from pure prussic acid, all human aid is too late. The strangest fact about that curious group of bodies called poisons is that sometimes they are not poisons. Of course, every one knows that when kept under control by the skilful hand of the physician, poisons are most valuable medicines. But few persons are aware of the still more curious fact that poisons, when taken by certain animals even in large quantities, are quite harmless.

Yet, strange as it may seem, this is perfectly true. Take, for instance, the hedgehog. This bristly little animal is absolutely poisonproof. It can eat without discomfort as much opium as a hardened Chinese can smoke in a fortnight and can wash a meal down with as much prussic acid as would kill a regiment of soldiers. It is capable of swallowing arsenic with just as much relish as it eats cockroaches. It is quite immune to the venom of the snake, though the prickly hedgehog has little to fear the approach of such reptiles. It has even been stated that it can swallow corrosive sublimate, and yet this is a virulent poison which human beings must handle with caution, for even a solution of it externally applied has been known to cause death.

Cyanide of potassium is another deadly substance, of which the hedgehog need have no fear, and yet the merest trace of the poison is sufficient to cause a full-grown man to foam at the mouth and lose the power of his limbs. Truly, the hedgehog is a strange freak, and yet not so inexplicable as the poisons by which he refuses to be poisoned.

Man is said to resemble the monkey in more ways than one, but whatever characteristics they may have in common, the ape differs from the human being in this respect—he can take with impunity as much strychnine as would kill two men instantly. The monkey, curiously enough, shares the immunity to strychnine poisoning with invertebrate animals. Another phenomenon is the rat. The number of rat poisons sold by druggists is legion, but there is one poison which never enters into their composition, namely, digitalin, the active principle of the fox-glove. One-half grain of this poisonous principle suffices to kill a man within three-quarters of an hour, but the rat absolutely refuses to let it kill him.

When it is discovered that a human being has swallowed oxalic acid the first thing the doctor does is to give his unfortunate patient a good dose of chalk, technically known as calcium carbonate. Strange to relate, chickens are not poisoned by oxalic acid for the simple reason that their intestines contain the antidote in the form of quantities of calcium, which combine with the poison and render it quite harmless. It is interesting, however, to mention that if oxalic acid is injected into the blood of a fowl it would be poisoned; it is only when given by the mouth that the acid comes in contact with the antidote. However, as chickens are not provided with hypodermic syringes, they are not likely to run any danger.

If China were inhabited by pigeons instead of by people who speak pigeon English, a costly war and no end of controversy might have been averted, for pigeons are not demoralized by opium. You cannot put a pigeon to sleep with the "drowsy giant," simply because there is something in the bird's interior which resists the narcotic influence of the morphine to which opium owes its activity.

There is little to connect the Russian peasant with a goat—unless it is the beard—yet, nevertheless, they have one trait in common; neither is harmed by hemlock. It was the juice of the hemlock, so we have been told until we are tired of hearing it, that killed Socrates. Ever since then it has been on the poison list as far as civilized beings are concerned, but, all the same, roots of hemlock are eaten as food by the Russian peasants—and by goats.

In one respect the peasant of the Austrian Tyrol resembles the hedgehog, because he can take in one dose as much arsenic as would kill several Americans. This is not because the peasant is provided with any special means of combating the effects of the drug, but because he habituates himself to it. The Tyrolean finds that arsenic increases his power of endurance; he commences by taking an eighth part of a grain for a dose, which is gradually increased until he can take without any ill effect five or more grains at a time.

Experts have not been able to make up their minds why these people become tolerant to the drug; the most plausible theory put forward up to the present is that an antitoxin is formed by the administration of the poison which immunizes the subject, just as calf lymph immunizes us against smallpox.

DEMOLISHING STANDS.

City Will Soon Present Normal Appearance—Sidewalks in Need of Repairing.

The demolition of the stands which were erected for the Fiesta parades is now under way. Yesterday morning a force was put at work on the stand in front of the City Hall and timbers were torn down in short order. Other stands are rapidly being razed and in two or three days the city will present a normal appearance.

More or less repair work will have to be done on the sidewalks where the uprights were put in place to support wires. In several cases the pressure of the crowd against the wires uprooted the posts and broke off chunks of the sidewalk.

On North Spring street some thoughtless individuals made use of the posts for hitching purposes and, though the police moved the horses whenever they noticed them, more or less damage was done by the animals pulling back.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Swanfeldt and daughter, Edla, of Michigan avenue, will leave today for a six-months' trip. They will spend some time in this country, and then go to Europe, visiting Mr. Swanfeldt's old homestead in Sweden.

EXHIBITION OF PAINTINGS.

Hobart Bosworth of Marietta, Ohio will make an exhibition of paintings at Steckel's Gallery, South Broadway, May 13th to 25th. He is an artist of note.

INDIAN MISSIONARY'S JUBILEE.

Hahn Will Soon Celebrate Close of a Quarter of a Century in Priesthood.

On June 8 Very Rev. B. Florian Hahn, missionary apostolic, and head of the Banning Indian School, will celebrate his silver jubilee, having at that time completed twenty-five years in the priesthood.

Twenty years of this quarter of a century have been given to the work among the Indians, and Father Hahn's labors have been in a great degree counterparts of those which the self-sacrificing Franciscan padres undertook years ago. He has had the long journeys, the attendant hardships, the struggle with a meagerness of funds for the work to be accomplished. The lamented late Archbishop Montgomery said of Father Hahn only a short time before the death of the archbishop: "I never knew a more apostolic man."

The priests of the diocese of Monterey and Los Angeles plan to recognize Father Hahn's silver jubilee by presenting him a purse of money sufficient to defray his expenses for a much needed rest and trip to his old home in the Fatherland.

In this gift many laymen will participate, and the matter has been placed in charge of Father Cain of Riverside, Father Brady of San Bernardino and Father Fitzgerald of Redlands, who will act as treasurers for the fund and will receive contributions.

MOVING PICTURES OF FIESTA.

Representatives of a New York moving-picture concern have been in town the past week gathering material on Fiesta and the Shriners' Conclave for vitascopic exhibitions. An excellent collection of films has been secured and will at once be forwarded to New York for developing. The representatives of the company state that the pictures will be exhibited in the leading vaudeville theaters of the country and will also be sent to Europe. A large number of standing orders from English managers are on hand. This is the first time any effort has been made to secure anything like a complete set of moving pictures of the Los Angeles Fiesta.

BUCKEYES' RECEPTION.

The Ohio Society will hold a reception on Tuesday evening in Fraternal Brotherhood Hall. Col. James H. Davidson, recently of Chicago, but now a resident of Pasadena, will deliver the principal address. Col. Davidson has been a war horse in the Ohio campaigns, and the society is expecting a treat. The little Bliss girls are on the programme for recitations. Instrumental and vocal music will be rendered by good talent. All Ohio people and friends are invited, and many Shriners remaining over will be present.

CHILDREN'S HOME.

The annual meeting of the Children's Home Society will be held at the Victoria Home Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The home has cared for 143 children the past year.

The Hair of Your Head.

Few people know that the number of hairs in the human head varies largely according to color. Taking four heads of human hair of different colors, but of equal weight, it has been found that the number of hairs to the head varies as follows: Red, 90,000; black 103,000; blond, 140,000. Red hair is usually the coarsest.

Dark brown hair is found most frequently in England, the proportions averaging as follows: Red-haired people, 30; black, 67; fair, 108; light brown, 338; and dark brown, 807.

TEACHING MINISTERS HOW TO WIN SOULS.

Methodists Arrange Details of Institute to Be Held Here Next Month—Will Devote a Day to Patriotism and the Flag—Conference Plan Changed.

The four presiding elders of the Methodist conference of Southern California had their final meeting yesterday with Hugh E. Smith, field secretary of the Evangelistic Commission, who left last night for Wichita, Kan., after having spent but a day with his family in this city.

The details for the evangelistic institute, which was announced in these columns some days ago to be held May [illegible] and 31, were worked out definitely before Mr. Smith left for the East. The institutes will be under the leadership of Dr. Henderson, another secretary of the commission, and Mr. Smith will have charge of the evangelistic meetings. The presiding elders will have direction of a retreat for ministers, held each morning at 9 o'clock, and all the ministers in Southern California will be enlisted in the movement for "a revival in every charge," which has been adopted as the motto of the institute.

The object is not only to instruct and [illegible] people, but to make every [illegible] a better evangelist, that he [illegible] more successfully work among the people of his charge.

The institute will open with a great [illegible] meeting on the evening of the [illegible] and on Memorial Day the subject will be "The Flag." A remarkable [illegible] of old soldiers is to be [illegible] among the membership and in the ministry of the Methodist Church, [illegible] day is designed to accentuate [illegible] to the country and the country's flag, as the duty of Christian [illegible]. May 31 will be the climax day. [illegible] the institute all the well-[illegible] ministers in the Methodist [illegible] of Southern California will be [illegible] and lectures have been arranged for by Dr. Robert McIntyre, [illegible] McClish, Dr. A. W. Lamport, [illegible] F. Howe and many others.

[illegible] E. Smith, who is the only [illegible] of the Evangelistic Commission on the Pacific Coast, has charge [illegible] territory south of Spokane, and [illegible] Sunday closed a series of meetings which shows phenomenal results. [illegible] converts of the meetings, 230 [illegible] into the Riverside Methodist Church alone, and more than 200 [illegible] were scattered among other [illegible] of the town. An institute will [illegible] there on May 26, 27 and 28, [illegible] days prior to the dates set for [illegible].

[illegible] important announcement was [illegible] yesterday affecting the business of the Southern California Conference. From time immemorial it [illegible] the custom to hold the several [illegible] anniversaries during the [illegible] of conference week, but this [illegible] is to be changed. The secretaries [illegible] allotted time during the afternoons, to present the causes of [illegible] boards, and the evenings [illegible] given over to evangelistic meetings. Through the efforts of the [illegible] Commission this change [illegible] has been brought about, and J. W. [illegible], an able evangelist, has already been assigned to the duty of [illegible] the meetings during the [illegible] which will be held in Long [illegible] in September.

[illegible] will be followed up by a campaign throughout the Methodist [illegible] of Southern California, by [illegible] J. W. Patterson and C. H. [illegible].

[illegible] these things are the result of [illegible] of aggressive evangelism outlined by Hugh E. Smith to [illegible] conference, in this city in [illegible] resulted in the selection [illegible] Commission on Evangelism, and [illegible] choice of himself as one of its [illegible].

PEARY NEEDS CASH.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, April 25.—Robert E. Peary, more hopeful than ever of reaching the Pole, is rushing his preparations to take the Roosevelt north again. He proposes to leave New York by the end of June, or in the first week in July. After wintering on the north coast of Greenland, he will make his dash for the coveted prize in February, and hopes to return triumphant about fourteen months after steaming from New York.

Only the lack of absolute certainty that enough money will be forthcoming to finance the expedition is troubling him.

"It is incredible with so many men in New York, who could spare $100,000 without missing it, it that the expedition should have to be abandoned for lack of funds," said Mr. Peary.

"Honestly, I have no doubt that the money will come from somewhere, though I have no absolute assurance of it as yet."

Mr. Peary regrets that a statement was recently made that he had $200,000 in hand to finance his expedition. "Forty thousand is the absolute limit of my resources so far," he said, "and the expedition cannot start until the amount is increased to $100,000."

MINING MAN MISSING.

EL PASO (Tex.) April 25.—John M. Seton, a well-known mining man of Cananea, Sonora, Mex., has mysteriously disappeared and it is now believed that he has been murdered, as when last seen ten days ago he had a large sum of money on his person. Diligent search is being made for him.

CHICAGO REACHES SAN JOSE.

GUATEMALA CITY (Guatemala) April 25.—The United States cruiser Chicago arrived today at San José. She brought Phillip Brow, secretary of the American legation, who was instrumental in bringing about the peace agreement at Amapala. Mr. Brown's services were greatly appreciated.

DELICATE CHILDREN

Advice to Los Angeles Mothers Who Have Delicate Children

If we could only make all fathers and mothers in Los Angeles regard what we say there would be fewer sickly, delicate children on our streets.

Rapidly growing children need a great deal of vitality. They grow fast, play hard, and work too hard at school, and many such children are tired, thin, pale and worn out when they ought to be robust and rosy.

Every run-down growing child in Los Angeles should take Vinol, our delicious cod liver preparation without oil. It requires almost no indigestion at all and cannot upset delicate, weakened stomachs as do old-fashioned cod liver oil and emulsions. Vinol also contains peptonate of iron.

It strengthens the digestive organs, makes new vitality, sound flesh and muscle tissue, strong bone structure, and pure, rich, red blood. Vinol fills out the hollow cheeks and makes thin little arms and legs plump and round.

Said a member of The Owl Drug Co., "We cannot recommend Vinol too highly for puny, weak and ailing children, to build up the run-down, over-worked, tired and debilitated, or to give renewed vitality to the aged, and we cheerfully refund the money in every case where it fails."

The Owl Drug Co.,
320 SO. SPRING ST.

NOTE.—While we are sole agents for Vinol in Los Angeles, it is now for sale at the leading drug store in nearly every city and town in the country. Look for the Vinol agency in your town.
